ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Firstly, I thank GOD for all the blessing, and strength and courage to continue working hard every day.

Special thanks to my supervisor Professor Shikha Vyas-Doorgapersad for her wisdom, intellectual guidance, patience and encouragement throughout the course of this research.

Precious Mom (Josephine Poopa) you have been so much player in my life, without you this would not be much in a beautiful shape. You presence in my life taught me so much about love and gracious support, and guidance. To my beloved late father Mpho Poopa, I still wish you were here.

To my son Kamohelo Poopa, you presence indeed came with a bucket of encouragement that led me to be strong and take a step to be serious about what I want in life and have this thought that one day you will say “this belong to my father” and his mother Nthepeane Mokoena for her significance contribution and participation in the research.

To my two brothers (Lebohang and Mohlophehi Poopa) and two sisters (Refilwe and Dianetse Poopa), thanks guys, for you’re never ending support and love as a strong bond, through your support and guidance, I am grateful to have you. I pray to God to continue blessing you with love. I love you guys.

I will also pass my gratitude to my Supervisors at work John smith and Bongi Memeza, for your support that means a lot to me and to this dissertation, your assistance meant so much to me and also to my colleagues for their significance contributions. May God bless you!

Sincere appreciation to GDE Librarians for you gracious support, it really contributed a lot.
ABSTRACT

The Gauteng Department of Education (GDE) is powered by the Public Service Regulations Government Notice No R441 of 25 May 2001 (as amended) chapter 1, Regulation VIII, Section A, that outlines the principles of managing performance stating that Departments shall manage performance in a consultative, supportive and non-discriminatory manner in order to enhance organizational efficiency and effectiveness, accountability for the use of resources and the achievement of results.

It is witnessed through personal observation and personalized interviews with some of the employees that supervisors and managers of the delegated units within the GDE does not take initiative to guide, inform and aware their subordinates regarding the availability of services benefits within the organization. It is furthermore related to the challenge regarding lack of training and informative sessions within the organization. In order to improve these challenges, the hypothesis for the study was formulated as 'the effective service benefits may improve employee performance at Gauteng Department of Education'.

The semi-structured interviews were conducted with respondents from senior management, employees and officials. This included qualitative questionnaires to obtain their opinion on the impact of the service benefits for enhanced employee performance at GDE. The convenient sampling was utilized to approach target population in order to obtain responses.

The findings explored that the GDE needs to facilitate information sessions guiding the employees at lower management levels regarding the job description and job specification requirements of the top and middle management levels. The information regarding the tasks and responsibilities associated with the position/rank are linked with remuneration packages and service benefits. The GDE furthermore needs to inform employees that the service benefits are equally considered at different levels of management.
horizontally. The service benefits differ at different levels of management on vertical basis based on job requirements in the organization.

The study concludes that the GDE needs to understand that there are implications of salary levels to employees' performance at the workplace. Employees who are not financially secured and satisfied with service benefits are concerned regarding the cost of living. This concern may have negative impact on employees' motivation and morale to reflect better productivity in the organization.

It is recommended to further explore the possibility of establishing a macro-analytical correlation between 'service benefits of employees' and 'organizational efficiency' for improved delivery of services.

CHAPTER 5 .............................................................................................................. 53

FINDINGS, SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATIONS .............................. 53

The chapter explored the various service benefits available at the GDE. ........................................................................................................................................................................... 54

It is always been this way everywhere in the public service whereby employee are remunerated and benefitting from the department in different ways resulting from their salary levels, and this create a tension between the management and the subordinates, which is highly depicted by their difference in salary levels. ........................................................................................................... 54

The findings revealed the fact that a number of employees resigned from the GDE. The main reason includes challenge in the equity remuneration whereby two employees are appointed at the same level but are not performing the same nature of tasks. This has resulted into one employee doing more tasks than the other employee leading into dissatisfaction.
