The Public Trust Doctrine in the South African Water Law: Does the Inter Vivos Trust-shoe fit?

AC ROOS
10958207

Mini- Dissertation submitted in fulfilment of the requirements for the degree Magister Legum in Estate Law at the Potchefstroom Campus of the North-West University

Supervisor/Promoter: Prof E Van Der Schyff
Co-supervisor/Co-promoter: Prof JP Coetzee

November 2016
Vir ouma Lettie
ABSTRACT

With the promulgation of the National Water Act 36 of 1998, the South African water law changed dramatically. In order to restore the irregularities of the apartheid regime, the national government has been appointed to act as the trustee of the nation’s water resources. This fiduciary concept is novel to South African law and shows strong similarities with the public trust doctrine as it functions in certain foreign legal jurisdictions. For purposes of this research, it is assumed that the notion of a public trust has been accepted and incorporated into South African law.

The main objective of this investigation is to determine whether the notion of a public trust can be compared to the inter vivos private law trust as contemplated in the Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988.

Key words: Water, National Water Act, public trustee, public trust, Trust Property Control Act, trust in the narrow sense, trust in the wide sense, fiduciary duty, Inter Vivos trust, founder, trustee, beneficiary, trust deed
OPSOMMING

Die inwerkingtreding van die Nasionale Waterwet 36 van 1998, het die waterregbedeling in Suid-Afrika dramaties verander. Ten einde die oneweredige verdeling van natuurlike hulpbronne soos water onder die apartheidsbedeling te herstel, is die nasionale regering aangestel as die trustee van die land se waterhulpbronne. Dié fidusiële konsep van 'public trusteeship' of publieke trusteeskap is vreemd aan die Suid-Afrikaanse reg en toon sterk ooreenkomste met die 'public trust'-leerstuk soos dit funksioneer in sekere buitelandse jurisdikties. Vir die doeleindes van hierdie navorsing word aanvaar dat die konsep van 'n publieke trust aanvaar word en geïnkorporeer is in die Suid-Afrikaanse reg.

Die hoofdoel van hierdie navorsing is om te bepaal of die konsep van 'n publieke trust vergelyk kan word met die inter vivos privaatreg trust, soos gedefinieer in die Wet op die Beheer van Trustgoed 57 van 1988.

Sleutelwoorde: water, Nasionale Waterwet, publieke trustee, publieke trust, Wet op Beheer van Trustgoed, trust in die eng sin, trust in die wye sin, fidusiële plig, Inter Vivos trust, oprigter, trustee, begunstigde, trust akte
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am forever indebted to the following parties, for without their involvement this research would have never seen the light.

My Heavenly Father - thank you for my blessed life and for loving me unconditionally.

Prof Elmarie van der Schyff - My promoter and mentor who supported and guided me throughout this research. Your high ethical standards, outstanding professionalism, insight into and love for the research topic were my motivation. Without your support, this work would not have been completed.

Prof Japie Coetzee - My co-promoter and mentor whose insight into the trust law was of crucial importance for this research and a tremendous motivation for me.

Me Christine Bronkhorst - Information specialist at the Ferdinand Postma Library and the personnel and staff at the NWU Law Faculty are thanked for assistance during the course of my study.

My husband Fanie Roos –Thank you for loving me. Your support, patience, encouragement and interest throughout this study kept me going. Thank you for understanding why this was important to me.

My children Adeline and Wickus, thank you for being the best children in the world!

My mother Riana le Roux and mother-in-law, Lien Roos, my colleagues, in particular Beatrix, Mariska, Monica, Rebecca and Roxy and my friends and family are thanked for their support and sincere interest.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TABLE OF CONTENTS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>ABSTRACT</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>OPSOMMING</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.2.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.2.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.1.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.1.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.1.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.1.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Section</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.1.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.2.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.2.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.2.2.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4.2.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5.3.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5.3.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5.3.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.3.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.3.2</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
5.3.3 The beneficiaries of the two notions 68
5.4 Pursuing the possibilities 68
6 Conclusion and recommendations 69

BIBLIOGRAPHY 73
Literature 73
Contributions at conferences 87
Case law 88
Legislation 91
Internet resources 92
Other papers and reports 93
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Full Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>AD</td>
<td>Appellate Division</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CIR</td>
<td>Commissioner for Inland Revenue</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DTLA</td>
<td>South African Development Trust and Land Act 18 of 1936</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ENVTL</td>
<td>Environmental Affairs Law Review</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MPRDA</td>
<td>Mineral and Petroleum Resources Act 28 of 2004</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NEMA</td>
<td>National Environmental Management Act 107 of 1998</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NEMA: BD</td>
<td>National Environmental Management: Biodiversity Act 10 of 2004</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NWA</td>
<td>National Water Act 36 of 1998</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PELJ</td>
<td>Potchefstroom Electronic Law Journal</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PER</td>
<td>Potchefstroomse Elektroniese Regstydskrif</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SA</td>
<td>South Africa</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SADT</td>
<td>South African Development Trust</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SAJHR</td>
<td>South African Journal on Human Rights</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SALJ</td>
<td>South African Law Journal</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SARS</td>
<td>South African Revenue Service</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SCA</td>
<td>Supreme Court of Appeal</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Stell LR</td>
<td>Stellenbosch Law Review</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>THRHR</td>
<td>Tydskrif vir Hedendaagse Romeins-Hollandse Reg</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trust Act</td>
<td>Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TSAR</td>
<td>Tydskrif vir Suid-Afrikaanse reg</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>UC Davis LR</td>
<td>University of California Davis Law Review</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
1 Context and methodology

1.1 Introduction and problem statement

It is indisputable that water is a life-giving, scarce and precious natural resource.¹ It is equally indisputable that a historical overview of the regulatory regime in which water was regulated in the pre-constitutional era indicates that access to South Africa’s water resources was determined by a race-based discriminatory model.² The Constitution of the Republic of South Africa³ promised harmonious equality to all and in an effort to negate past discriminatory practices that prevented equal access to water resources; the National Water Act⁴ was promulgated on 26 August 1998.⁵ The NWA is aimed at fundamentally reforming the previous water law regime by aligning South African water law and water resources management practices with the principles of equal entitlement to rights, privileges and benefits as stated in Section 1 of the Constitution.⁶ The NWA was preceded by the White Paper on a National Water Policy for South Africa, 1997.⁷ One of the key proposals contained in the White Paper is that national government should act as the custodian of the nation’s water resources and exercise its powers within a

¹ De la Harpe and Ramsden Guide to the National Water Act 3; Pienaar and Van der Schyff 2009 Forum on Public Policy: A Journal of the Oxford Round Table 183; Paragraph 2.2.2 of the White Paper on a National Water Policy for South Africa, 1997; preamble of the National Water Act 36 of 1998; Sax 1984 Berkeley Law Scholarship Repository 274 refer to water as “a shared resource. It is used and reused”; Young Public Trusteeship and Water Management 1.
⁴ National Water Act 36 of 1998 (hereinafter referred to as “The NWA”).
⁵ According to De la Harpe and Ramsden Guide to the National Water Act 7, “The National Water Act is important because it will put in place those things contained in the South African Constitution that are about water;” According to Stein 2002 Natural resources law: School of law - University of Colorado 3, “The National Water Act has effected an essential and radical transformation of the regulatory regime governing water resource management in South Africa. It has abolished a private rights system of water allocation and has introduced a public rights system. It ensures that water is treated in an integrated fashion and, wherever it occurs in the hydrological cycle, is a resource common to all.”
⁷ Hereinafter referred to as the “White Paper.”
public trust.\textsuperscript{8} This policy was entrenched in the NWA in the notion of public trusteeship.\textsuperscript{9} In this capacity, the national government must see to the protection of the water resources and ensure sustainable and equitable use, development, management and control thereof.\textsuperscript{10} The fiduciary responsibility as created by the provisions of the NWA obliges national government, acting through the minister, to act as the public trustee. National government may therefore be regarded as the protector or keeper of the country’s natural water resources.\textsuperscript{11}

More than 15 years have passed since the NWA has been enacted and the notion of public trusteeship as it is captured in the Act has still not been sufficiently delineated.\textsuperscript{12} However, existing research indicates that this newly created statutory notion of public trusteeship resembles the public trust doctrine as it functions in certain foreign legal jurisdictions.\textsuperscript{13} It is not the aim of this work to determine whether the NWA endeavoured to transplant a foreign doctrine into South African water law. For purposes of this dissertation, it is assumed that a stewardship doctrine of public trust has been statutorily incorporated and accepted into South African water law through the incorporation of the notion in the NWA.\textsuperscript{14} This novel development in South African jurisprudence should be analysed to ascertain the value that this

\begin{itemize}
  \item \textsuperscript{8} Paragraph 5.1.2 of the \textit{White Paper on a National Water Policy for South Africa}, 1997.
  \item \textsuperscript{9} Section 3 of the \textit{National Water Act} 36 of 1998; Van Der Schyff 2010 \textit{PELJ} 122.
  \item \textsuperscript{10} Section 3(1) of the \textit{National Water Act} 36 of 1998.
  \item \textsuperscript{11} Section 3(2) and (3) of the \textit{National Water Act} 36 of 1998.
  \item \textsuperscript{12} \textit{Agri South Africa v Minister for Minerals and Energy} 2013 ZACC 9 101; Van Der Schyff 2010 \textit{PELJ} 122; Young \textit{Public Trusteeship and Water Management} 12.
  \item \textsuperscript{13} Viljoen \textit{The Public Trust Doctrine in South African Water Law} 38 states that valuable lessons can be taken from the Anglo-American legal system for purposes of developing the public trust doctrine in South African water law as the public trust doctrine is well entrenched in the common law of the United States of America; Young \textit{Public Trusteeship and Water Management} 13 and 148; Pienaar and Van der Schyff 2009 \textit{Forum on Public Policy: A Journal of the Oxford Round Table} 187; Thompson \textit{Water Law} 279 is of the opinion that the principle of the public trust is based on Roman law from which South African water law descends and therefore not a new concept in South African water law; Van der Schyff \textit{The Constitutionality of Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act} 106 contradicts this view and indicates that the public trust doctrine was introduced in the water law dispensation through the \textit{White Paper}; Also see Huffman 1988 \textit{Envtl L} 527; In her later work, Viljoen 2016 \textit{"Legal Implications of the Concept of Public Trusteeship"}-a contribution at a colloquium regarding public trusteeship indicated that the Anglo American public trust doctrine “might not be the best notion to compare ours with;” also see Viljoen \textit{Water as Public Property} 186.
  \item \textsuperscript{14} Van der Schyff 2013 \textit{SALJ} 369-389.
\end{itemize}
development adds to the South African water law regime.\textsuperscript{15} The impact of this development on \textit{inter alia} the property rights regime underpinned by the NWA should be determined.\textsuperscript{16} Therefore it is significant to take note of the fact that the reference in the \textit{White Paper} to “public trust” and in the NWA to “trustee” and “trusteeship” corresponds, at first glance, strongly with terms used in and applicable to South African trust law.\textsuperscript{17} To date there has been no significant research comparing the notion of a public trust as statutorily created in the NWA and the \textit{inter vivos} trust as a particular mode of private law trusts. This study is therefore aimed at determining whether, and if so, to what extent the doctrine of public trust as envisaged in the \textit{White Paper} and incorporated in the NWA can be compared to the \textit{inter vivos} trust as provided for in the \textit{Trust Property Control Act}.\textsuperscript{18}

In order to reach this objective, the trust concept in South African law is contextualised in Paragraph 2, which provides a brief overview of the historical development of private law trusts. It continues with a discussion of the development of the trust idea, followed by the codification of the South African trust law and the trust in different contexts. Paragraph 2 concludes with a schematic portrayal of the different notions of the trust in the South African law. Paragraph 3 offers a discussion of the \textit{inter vivos} trust, focussing on meaningfully defining the \textit{inter vivos} trust. This is followed by an attempt to determine the legal nature of the \textit{inter vivos} trust, establishing how the \textit{inter vivos} trust comes into existence and what its essential elements are. The parties to an \textit{inter vivos} trust are identified and the trustees' fiduciary duties are investigated. Paragraphs 2 and 3 provide the benchmark against which the statutory public trust as created in the NWA is measured to determine the \textsuperscript{15} \textit{Agri South Africa v Minister for Minerals and Energy} 2013 ZACC 9 101; Van Der Schyff 2010 \textit{PELJ} 122; Young \textit{Public Trusteeship and Water Management} 12 - "As trusteeship is a new concept in the context of resource legislation, there is no assistance from the case law as to its application and interpretation; as such, Section 3 has not yet been considered by the courts at all."

\textsuperscript{16} Van Der Schyff 2013 \textit{SALJ} 369-389.

\textsuperscript{17} According to Huffman 1988 \textit{Environmental Law} 527 - some foreign courts have assumed that the public trust is part of the private trust law. Caspersen 1996 \textit{BC Envtl Aff LR} 361 states that "a helpful way of understanding the public trust doctrine is to look to the doctrine's parallels with private trusts."

\textsuperscript{18} 57 of 1988 (herein after referred to as the "Trust Act").
extent to which it is comparable with the legal figure of inter vivos trust. In Paragraph 4, the focus falls on the public trust in South African water law, which necessitates a brief overview of the historical development of South African water law. The origin and the development of the public trust idea are subsequently investigated, followed by an analysis of the statutory creation of the public trust in terms of the NWA. The paragraph launches an attempt to define the public trust in South African water law, followed by a discussion of the legal nature of the public trust and how the public trust comes into existence. The parties to the public trust are investigated and the public trustee's fiduciary duties are highlighted. In Paragraph 5, the incidences of similarity and the difference between the two notions are highlighted by comparing the characteristics of the private law inter vivos trust with that of the NWA-created public trust. Paragraph 6 concludes the research by providing an answer to the research question.

2 Contextualising the trust concept in South African Law

2.1 Introduction

A trust is an institution that facilitates a unique relationship of legal ownership and use of property. The definitional characteristic of this relationship is that the legal owner of the property, the trustee, does not benefit from the use of the property. The trustee is obliged to deal with the property exclusively in the interest of the beneficiaries, acting in a fiduciary manner. A cardinal point of departure to contextualise the private law trust concept is to provide a concise historical overview of the historical development of the trust institution.

20 Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 219; Du Toit South African Trust Law 2; Pieters Eienaarskap van Trustbates 3.
21 De Waal 1998 TSAR 329; Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 469-472; Du Toit 2001 TSAR 126; Doyle v Board of Executors 1999 2 SA 805 (C) 812 J 813A-B; the court confirmed the trustee’s duty to account to beneficiaries; Sackville West v Nourse 1925 AD 516,533; S 9(1) of the Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988; De Waal 2000 SALJ 548-557.
2.2 Brief overview of the historical development of trusts

2.2.1 Introductory remarks

In theory, a historical overview of the development of trust law in South Africa should be very simple. However, there are few fields of the law where the origins of a legal concept were initially so contested than trust law. Despite earlier controversy, it is generally accepted today that the trust concept was transplanted from English law. South African trust law therefore provides a good example of the mixed nature of the South African legal system because of the significant interplay of Roman-Dutch law and English law in this branch of the law. The English law trust was introduced at the Cape by British settlers during the first half of the nineteenth century. Although the Appellate Court endeavoured to define and describe the concept in terms of Roman-
Dutch law,\textsuperscript{26} the unique characteristics contained in the trust concept lead to its recognition as a distinct legal concept transplanted from English law.\textsuperscript{27} The fact that the origin of the trust as legal concept does not lie in Roman-Dutch law did not preclude courts from applying Roman-Dutch legal principles when interpreting the notion.\textsuperscript{28} Consequently, the “South African common law” of trusts is infused with principles of Roman and Roman-Dutch law with regard to, among others things, the standard of care, diligence and skill expected of trustees (being that of \textit{bonus et diligens paterfamilias}) and the remedies of trust beneficiaries against trustees in breach of trust.\textsuperscript{29}

De Waal and Paisley\textsuperscript{30} subsequently describe the South African trust institution as:

...a transplant from English law... When English and Scottish settlers arrived at the Cape in the early nineteenth century they brought the trust with them as part of their legal and intellectual baggage. These settlers started introducing the trust institution into South African practice... When the courts finally pronounced on the matter, it transpired that the English transplant was substantially transformed in accordance with civilian principles. The South African trust thus became a substantially indigenous institution that, paradoxically, shows considerable less English influence than its Scottish counterpart.

Coetzee\textsuperscript{31} explains that the correct approach in this matter is therefore to understand that the English trust concept was taken over from English law

\begin{flushright}
\textsuperscript{26} Braun v Blann and Botha 1984 2 SA 850 (A) 859, 866-867; Du Toit \textit{South African Trust Law} 1; De Waal 1993 \textit{THRHR} 1; Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg \textit{Trustreg en Praktyk} 1-24; Shrand \textit{Trusts in South Africa} 1; Estate Kemp v Macdonald's Trustee 1915 AD 491 499; Crookes v Watson & Others 1956 (1) SA 277; Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg \textit{Trustreg en Praktyk} 1-24; Olivier \textit{Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees} 23; Mthethwa \textit{The Common Law and Taxation of Trusts} 6.
\textsuperscript{27} According to Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 73 - the trust idea was foreign to the Roman-Dutch law and therefore commentators endeavoured to describe and define this concept in terms of known Roman-Dutch institutions like \textit{fideicommissum}, \textit{modus} and \textit{stipulatio alterii}. Another explanation is that it was adopted from other legal systems, for example the English law; \textit{Braun v Blann and Botha} 1984 2 SA 850 (A) 858H.
\textsuperscript{28} According to Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 73.
\textsuperscript{29} Du Toit “Roman-Dutch Law” 1.
\textsuperscript{30} De Waal and Paisley \textit{et al Mixed Legal Systems} 821.
\end{flushright}
into South African law, but that the trust was not developed in South Africa through English law principles. One of the most important aspects that were not taken over from English law is the fragmentation of ownership and equitable interest that characterises the English law trust.32 The importance of 31 Coetzees Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 86; De Waal 2000 SALJ 555 – “…the trust that first appeared in South Africa was, therefore, the English trust. But the trust that eventually emerged was something quite different. The introduction of the trust institution into South African practice by way of incorporation of trusts (as a notion was then conceived) and the use of the words ‘trust’ and ‘trustee’ in wills, deeds of gift, ante nuptial contracts and land transfers”; Du Toit South African Trust law 1; De Waal 1993 THRHR 1; Braun v Blann and Botha 1984 2 SA 850 (A); Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg Trustreg en Praktyk 1-24; Shrand Trusts in South Africa 1; Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915; Crookes v Watson & Others 1956 (1) SA 277 and Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 23.

32 Milo and Smits 2000 European Review of Private law 425; Hahlo and Kahn The SA Legal system and its background 576; Cameron et al Honore’s South African Law of Trusts 2; Du Toit South African Trust law 1; De Waal 1993 THRHR 56 1; Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg Trustreg en Praktyk 1-24; Shrand Trusts in South Africa 1; Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 23; Court precedents confirmed the reception of the English trust as an institution into South African trust law- Braun v Blann and Botha 1984 2 SA 850 (A); Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915; Crookes v Watson & Others 1956 (1) SA 277. Most of the definitions by English authors on the law of English trusts are also worth mentioning, mainly due to the strong correspondence that the foreign definitions have with the definition of a South African private law trust. The strong similarities between the definitions of the English trust and the South African private law trust bear testimony to the English influence of the development of the South African trust law and the reception of the English trust as an institution into South African law. In Oakley and Parker The Modern Law of Trusts 12-13, English authors such as Lord Coke defined a trust as “a confidence reposed in some other, not issuing out of the land but as a thing collateral thereto, annexed in privity to the estate of the land, and to the person touching the land, for which cestui que trust has no remedy but by subpoena in the Chancery.” The language may sound foreign, but what Lord Coke means when he refers to a trust being “collateral to land, not issuing out of it”, is that a trust is different from a legal proprietary interest. The reference to a trust being annexed in privity to the estate means that the trust will exist and continue as long as the estate exist and continues. There was some objections to Coke’s formulation, but bear in mind that this definition dates pre-1925, in terms of S 4(4) of The Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act of 1925, the Court of Chancery no longer exists and the Supreme Court of Judicature now has jurisdiction over equity matters. In Oakley and Parker The Modern Law of Trusts 13 Sir Arthur Underhill, who was considered the leading English author on the law of trusts and trustees, defined a trust as “an equitable obligation binding a person (who is called a trustee) to deal with property over which he has control (which is called trust property), for benefit of persons (who are called beneficiaries or cestuis que trust), of whom he may himself be one and any one of whom may enforce the obligation.” Mowbray Lewin on Trusts 1 referred to a more comprehensive definition given by an Australian judge, Mayo J. In his judgement in the Australian court case Re Scott (1948) S.A.S.R. 193 at 196, he defined a trust as “the duty or aggregate accumulation of obligations that rest upon a person described as trustee. The responsibilities are in relation to property held by him, under his control. That property he will be compelled by a court in its equitable jurisdiction to administer in the manner lawfully prescribed by the trust instrument, or where there be no specific provision written or oral, or to the extent that such provision is invalid or lacking, in accordance with equitable principles. As a consequence the administration will be in such a manner that the consequential benefits and advantages accrue, not to the trustee, but to the persons called cestuis que trust, or beneficiaries, this is that no total transplant of the English trust law into the South African trust law took place. It can rather be described as the unique development of the South African trust law, with goal-orientated adjustments and additions to the framework of the English trust law.\textsuperscript{33} The focus is consequently drawn to the development, through legislation and case law, of the trust idea in South Africa.

\textbf{2.2.2 The development of the trust idea}

Legislation pertaining to trusts dates back to before the formation of the Union of South Africa in 1910.\textsuperscript{34} Even though there is trust legislation that dates back as early as 1829, Olivier\textsuperscript{35} explains that the trust figure developed over a long period of time in South Africa and therefore the acknowledgement of the trust as legal construct cannot be linked to a specific date or event.\textsuperscript{36}

The first court decision that acknowledges the existence of trusts in South Africa was \textit{Twenty Man and Another v Hewitt}.\textsuperscript{37} The fact that reference was made by the court to the trust as legal construct, is of historical significance.\textsuperscript{38}
Since the court’s finding in the Hewitt-case\textsuperscript{39} in 1833, courts have acknowledged the trust figure without questioning its fundamental aspects or origin.\textsuperscript{40} The first appellate decision that indirectly confirmed the relevance of the trust figure in South African law was the 1912 case of \textit{Van der Plank v Otto}.\textsuperscript{41} Although the matter did not deal with the trust figure as such, the Court dealt in easement with 'trust-terms' such as “trustee”, “in trust” and “beneficiaries.” This is indicative of the court’s recognition that the trust as a legal institution was accepted into the South African law.\textsuperscript{42} This development led to the court finding of \textit{Sheriff v Greene}\textsuperscript{43} where the following was remarked:

“…(I)t is not a contract of mortgage at all, but an agreement by the defendants to hold a mortgage……. \textit{in trust} for the plaintiff”

In the 1914 appellate decision of \textit{Robertson v Robertson’s Executors}\textsuperscript{44}, the trust figure was also acknowledged when the judge referred to the naked ownership that vested in the trustees and ruled that the property would be passed on to the beneficiaries. During these early years, South African courts were adamant that their acknowledgement of the trust as an institution did not mean that the South African law was taken over by the English trust law.\textsuperscript{45} It was accepted that a \textit{mortis causa} trust is formed in terms of the provisions of

\begin{itemize}
\item \textsuperscript{39} Twenty Man v Hewitt 1833 Menzies Reports 1828-1849 Vol 1 156.
\item \textsuperscript{40} Buissine v Mulder et Uxor 1835 Menzies Reports 1828-1849 Vol.1; Devenish v Peacock and Josef 1843 Menzies Reports 1828-1849 Vol.3 503; Trustees of South Africa Bank v Chiappini 1868 Buch Reports 1868-1870 143; Lucas’ Trustee v Ismael and Amod 1905 TS 239; Ex Parte Ross 1909 TS 1132; Ex Parte Kerr 1914 AD 503; - also see Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte se Regte 76-78 and Coertze Die Trust in die Romeins-Hollandse Reg 54-58.
\item \textsuperscript{41} Van der Plank v Otto 1912 AD 353.
\item \textsuperscript{42} Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 78; Van der Plank v Otto 1912 AD 359 – Judge of Appeal Solomon explained “The defendant is the present trustee, and she holds all this property on behalf of the beneficiaries named in the deed of transfer, and subject to the trusts…”.
\item \textsuperscript{43} Sheriff v Greene 1913 AD 240 – 249.
\item \textsuperscript{44} Robertson v Robertson’s Executors 1914 AD 503.
\item \textsuperscript{45} Lucas’ Trustee v Ismael and Amod 1905 TS 239 244- Judge Innes pointed this out clearly by stating: “If the word trustee is employed as somehow vaguely introducing the English doctrine of trusts, whether express or constructive and as such implying the existence of some real right in the \textit{cestui que} trust which would not be conferred by our law, then it is a dangerous word and would be very strictly scrutinized.” Judge Innes confirmed this in his judgment of \textit{Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee} 1915 AD 499 whose view was also supported by Judge Solomon in par 509 of the same judgement.
\end{itemize}
the last will of a person and comes into effect upon the death of the testator, and that an inter vivos trust is a trust that is formed during the lifetime of the founder. In the Estate Kemp case, the court investigated the trust figure and confirmed that a trust is either a fideicommissum in the case of a testamentary trust or a stipulatio alterii in the case of an inter vivos trust. The outcome of the Estate Kemp case set the precedent for courts to rule on trust matters for the next 70 years. The 1984 court ruling in Braun v Blann and Botha released the mortis causa trust from its fideicommissum-shackles by finding that it is a legal institution sui generis. The legal nature of the inter vivos trust is discussed in more detail in Paragraph 3.3 of this work.

2.3 Codification of the trust law

It has been indicated above that the South African law of trusts is mainly governed by South African common law rules derived from English and Roman-Dutch law and court decisions throughout the years. In 1983 the South African Law Commission, as it was then called, approved a working paper entitled "Law of Trusts", which was discussed at various seminars and published for comment. During this process, the Commission identified a need for the more comprehensive regulation of trust property. They also confirmed that the commentators preferred minimal intervention by National Government and the existence of the trust as a "flexible" institution.

---

46 Sher 2005 ISSN 77; Coetzee 2007 De Rebus 26; Lamprecht Die Bestaansreg van 'n Besigheidstrust 5; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 8.
47 Sher 2005 ISSN 77; Lamprecht Die Bestaansreg van 'n Besigheidstrust 5.
48 Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD 491; see also CIR v Estate Crewe 1943 AD 656; Crookes v Watson & Others 1956 (1) SA 277 and Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 23.
49 Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD 491; see also CIR v Estate Crewe 1943 AD 656; Crookes v Watson & Others 1956 (1) SA 277 and Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 23.
50 Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Rehte 79.
51 Braun v Blann and Botha 1984 2 SA 850 (A) 859E-H.
52 Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 1; Parker v Land and Agricultural Bank of SA 2003 1 All SA 258 (T).
53 Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 22; Cameron et al Honore’s South African Law of Trusts 8.
54 The “South African Law Commission” is today known as the “South African Law Reform Commission”.
55 Working paper 3 that was published in GN 132 in GG 9070 of 24 February 1984.
56 Smith The Authorization of Trustees 42.
Subsequently, the Trust Property Control Act was promulgated on 1 March 1989. It seeks to regulate mainly administrative aspects relating to trusts. The purpose of the Trust Act can be found in the short preamble, which states: "to regulate further, the control of trust property and to provide for matters connected therewith." An important aspect of the promulgation of the Trust Act is that a degree of control over trustees was codified for the first time. Section 6(1) appoints the Master of the High Court to oversee and act in trust affairs and to impose trust duties on trustees. The act included the requirement of written authorisation by the Master of the High Court, for a trustee to act as such.

The Trust Act also introduced an authoritative statutory definition of “trust” into South African law, which is dealt with in more detail in Paragraph 3 hereunder. Despite the promulgation of the Trust Act, the South African common law rules remain applicable to all trusts in South Africa in so far as they are compatible with the provisions of the Act. The development of trust law and the definition of certain terms in the trust law have been left to the courts and authors on the law of trusts.

---

57 Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988 (herein after referred to as the Trust Act)
58 Smith The Authorization of Trustees 44; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 1; Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 1; Section 6(1) of the Trust Act states: Any person whose appointment as trustee in terms of a trust instrument, Section 7 or a court order comes into force after the commencement of this act, shall act in that capacity only if authorised thereto in writing by the Master.
60 Land and Agricultural Bank of SA v Parker 2005 2 SA 77 (SCA) and Doyle v Board of Executors 1992; also see Du Toit South African Trust Law 1.
61 Honoré The South African Law of Trusts 6; Cameron et al Honore's South African Law of Trusts 1; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 42-44 – The recommendation by the South African Law Commission that there was no need to codify the South African trust law but only to comprehensively regulate trust property, based its conclusion on the preference by the majority of commentators for minimal intervention by government in order to keep the trust as a flexible institution. Smith further states that "These sentiments were echoed in par 1.10 of the Commission's Report on the review of the law of trusts of 1987... in which it was stated that, although developments as far as the law of trusts is concerned only take place on a piecemeal basis, our Courts were still in the process of developing the South African law of trusts –any attempt at codifying this branch of the law 'would result in an undesirable rigidity and (would only serve to) hamper further development.'"
2.4 The trust in different contexts

Broadly speaking\textsuperscript{62}, the term “trust” in the South African private trust law is used in different contexts,\textsuperscript{63} namely the trust in the narrow sense\textsuperscript{64}, the trust in the wide sense,\textsuperscript{65} the ‘bewind’-trust,\textsuperscript{66} and the business and family trust.\textsuperscript{67} The importance of distinguishing between these different notions of trusts "becomes pertinent when trusteeship under each is at issue."\textsuperscript{68} The different contexts are now discussed in more detail.

2.4.1 The trust in the narrow sense

Honore’s\textsuperscript{69} description of a trust in the narrow sense is:

When the creator or founder of the trust has handed over to another the control of property which is to be administered or disposed of by the other (the trustee or administrator) for the benefit of some person other than the trustee as beneficiary, or for some impersonal object.

Du Toit\textsuperscript{70} refers to trust in the narrow sense as a legal institution and defines it as follows:

\begin{verbatim}

\end{verbatim}

\textsuperscript{62} Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 1-4 refers to the outcome of Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers 1996 3 SA 786 (C) at 794D-E and states that the term trust can be interpreted in the wide as well as the narrow sense. Another type of trust namely the "bewind"-trust is pointed out by Olivier L 1997 TSAR 4 and Smith The Authorization of Trustees 4 as a type of trust in the South African law, also see Zinn v Westminster Bank Ltd NO 1936 AD 89 at 96,97. A fourth type of trust in the South African law namely the business and family trust was identified by Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 19 - Robbertse also states that in Braun v Blann and Botha 1984 2 SA 850 (A) 859 E-G the court found the "the South African law of trusts has gone through an era of evolution. In every aspect of the law, no one thing is set in stone, and the law constantly develops to form new legal positions and possibilities that people can explore. Thus, it is not surprising that this newer type of trust, unknown to trusts in general has been introduced into our system and has moved under the radar for a while."

\textsuperscript{63} Olivier 1997 TSAR 4; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 9.

\textsuperscript{64} Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 1-4; Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers 1996 3 SA 786 (C) at 794D-E.

\textsuperscript{65} Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 1-4; Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers 1996 3 SA 786 (C) at 794D-E.

\textsuperscript{66} Olivier 1997 TSAR 4; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 4; Zinn v Westminster Bank Ltd NO 1936 AD 89 at 96, 97.

\textsuperscript{67} Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 19.

\textsuperscript{68} Du Toit South African Trust Law 3.

\textsuperscript{69} Cameron et al Honore’s South African Law of Trusts 4.
A trust in the narrow sense is said to exist when one person (the founder of the trust) has handed over or is bound to hand over the control of property to another (the trustee in the narrow sense), which property and/or its proceeds is to be administered by the trustee for the benefit of some person or persons other than the trustee or in pursuance of an impersonal object.

The trust in the narrow sense or private law trust is the trust as defined in the Trust Act\(^{71}\) as:

The arrangement through which the ownership in property of one person is by virtue of a trust instrument made over or bequeathed to another person, the trustee, in whole or in part, to be administered or disposed of according to the provisions of the trust instrument for the benefit of the person or class of persons designated in the trust instrument or for the achievement of the object stated in the trust instrument.

It is evident from these definitions that the trust in the narrow sense is the trust that comes into existence by virtue of a trust instrument in terms of which the property of one person is transferred or bequeathed to someone else who deals with the property not for his or her own benefit, but for the benefit of another person or persons. The trustee of the trust in the narrow sense also holds office in terms of the provisions in the Trust Act\(^{72}\) In this instance, the trustee becomes the owner of the trust property, even though the property does not form part of the trustee’s personal estate.\(^{73}\) The separation of ownership and control from the enjoyment of the trust benefits forms the "core 71 Section 1(a) of the Trust Act; Cameron et al Honoré’s South African Law of Trusts 3; Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 469.

72 Jowell v Bramwell-Jones 1998 1 SA 836 (W) 852J; Hofer v Kevitt 1998 1 SA 382 (SCA) 386D; Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker 2004 4 1 All SA 261 (SCA) 268a.
73 Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 219; Du Toit South African Trust Law 2; Pieters Eienaarskap van Trustbates 3; Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers (Pty) Ltd 1996 (3) SA 786 (C) 794D-E; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 5.
idea” of the trust in the narrow sense. The definition of ‘trust’ in the Trust Act confirms Cameron JA’s view that the ‘core idea’ of the trust is:

The functional separation of the trustee’s ownership (or control) over trust property from the enjoyment derived from such ownership (or control) through the bestowal of trust benefits on the trust’s beneficiaries or through the achievement of the trusts object.

The functionary (trustee), who administers or disposes of trust property, acts under the provisions of his office as trustee. As soon as a person accepts the office of trustee, a fiduciary relationship comes into existence between the trust beneficiary and the trustee. The fiduciary nature is one of the principle characteristics of the office as trustee and therefore the trustee is subject to a fiduciary duty. This fiduciary duty arises out of the trust instrument.

Trusts in the narrow sense are described according to the way they are formed. A mortis causa trust is formed in terms of the provisions of the last will of a person and comes into effect upon the death of the testator. An inter vivos trust is a trust that is formed during the lifetime of the founder.

In the South African private trust law, there are two specific and somewhat peculiar forms of trusts in the narrow sense, namely the ‘bewind’ trust and the 'business and the family trust'. These trusts are typified as 'peculiar' because they are specific manifestations of trust in the narrow sense. Even though these notions of trusts are not specifically defined in the Trust Act, they are recognised by authors\textsuperscript{85} and in case law\textsuperscript{86} as such. It is important to understand the difference between the true trust in the narrow sense\textsuperscript{87} and these types of trusts.\textsuperscript{88} The bewind trust comes into existence when ownership of the trust property is transferred to the beneficiary or beneficiaries of the trust while the control over the property remains vested in the trustee.\textsuperscript{89} The existence of a "newer type of trust"\textsuperscript{90} was confirmed in the South African trust law in the case of Nieuwoudt v Vrystaat Mielies (Edms) Bpk,\textsuperscript{91} namely the so-called business or family trust.\textsuperscript{92} Judge Harmse\textsuperscript{93} refers to the existence of this new type of trust when he states:

The trust deed in this case is typical of a newer type of trust where someone, probably for estate planning purposes or to escape the constraints imposed by corporate law, forms a trust while everything else remains as before...\textsuperscript{94}

It is the opinion of Robbertse\textsuperscript{95} that "this type of trust comes into existence as a result of the abuse of a normal trust." This type of trust is created by the

\begin{flushright}
85 Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 18; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 7.
86 Nieuwoudt v Vrystaat Mielies (Edms) Bpk 2004 3 SA 486 (SCA) 493E; Braun v Blann and Botha 1984 2 SA 850 (A) 864G–H.
87 The researcher refers to "true trust in the narrow sense" to distinguish for purposes of this paragraph between a notion of trust where the trust property vests in the trustees and is controlled by the trustees, and the other two forms of the notion as discussed in this paragraph.
88 Smith The Authorization of Trustees 7; Honoré The South African Law of Trusts 2-3 only distinguish between trust in the wide sense and trust in the narrow sense. They are of the opinion that the distinguishable feature to determine whether a notion of trust is that of a trust in the narrow sense or the trust in the wide sense is not determining if ownership of property was transferred to the trustees or not, but whether control thereof was transferred to the trustees. Joubert 1969 THRHR 262 challenged the position that a trust in the narrow sense exist when ownership of the assets are vested in the beneficiaries. However, it is necessary as Du Toit South African Trust Law 3 rightfully points out that it is important to distinguish between these different notions of trusts because it “becomes pertinent when trusteeship under each is at issue.”
89 Smith The Authorization of Trustees 7; Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers (Pty) Ltd 1996 3 SA 786 (C) 794 D-E; Du Toit South African Trust Law 3.
90 in this particular case in the context of the business trust
91 Nieuwoudt v Vrystaat Mielies (Edms) Bpk 2004 3 SA 486 (SCA) 493E.
92 Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 19.
93 Nieuwoudt v Vrystaat Mielies (Edms) Bpk 2004 3 SA 486 (SCA) 493E.
94 Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 19.
95 Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 19.
\end{flushright}
founders in the normal prescribed way according to the Trust Act, but not for the benefit of a third, but "rather for their own benefit." The lack in separation of estates and control has been referred to as the infringement of the ‘core idea’ of a trust. The latter is therefore the characteristic that differentiates the business or family trust from the general trust in the narrow sense.

2.4.2 The trust in the wide sense

According to Olivier, a trust in the wide sense is:

where the property of another is to be administered by any person’s executor, tutor, curator in terms of the provisions of the Administration of Estates Act, 1965 (Act 66 of 1965). The latter part of s 1(b) of the Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988.

Honore refers to trust in the general (wide) sense as:

a legal institution in which a person, the trustee subject to public supervision, holds or administers property separately from his or her own, for the benefit of another person or persons or for the furtherance of a charitable or other purpose.

In the instance of a trust in the wide sense, the 'administrator' of the property does not become its owner. Du Toit refers to the trust in a wide sense “as a somewhat generic term" that embodies any legal arrangement between a functionary and another person regarding the control and administration of an impersonal object. A common characteristic of a trust in the wide sense is that all instances such as inter alia tutorship, curatorship and executorship,

---

96 Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 20; Van der Linde 2012 THRHR 372, Van der Merwe v Bosman 2010 5 SA 555 (WC) 87.
97 Olivier, Strydom en Van Den Berg Trustreg en Praktyk 1-6; In his doctoral thesis Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 217 which was concluded before the promulgation of the Trust Act, Olivier refers to a trust in the wide sense as a relationship that develops when the affairs of one person is entrusted in another person such as a guardian, agent or executor. This person is a mere controller of the affairs and not the owner.
98 The latter part of s 1(b) of the Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988.
100 Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 218.
101 Du Toit South African Trust Law 2.
102 Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers (Pty) Ltd 1996 3 SA 786 (C) 794D-E; Also see Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 9.
are typified by a fiduciary relationship in terms of which the functionary is duty-bound to show the utmost good faith to the beneficiary in the wide sense in the administration of the personal object.\textsuperscript{103}

\textbf{2.4.3 Distinction between the trust in the wide sense and the trust in the narrow sense.}

The previous paragraphs established that in South Africa, the trust in the wide sense and the trust in the narrow sense falls under the umbrella of the South African private trust law. The \textit{Trust Act} only governs the trust in the narrow sense.\textsuperscript{104} The trust in a wide sense is "a somewhat generic term" that embodies any legal arrangement between a functionary and another person with regard to control and administration of an impersonal object.\textsuperscript{105} Trusts in the wide sense overarch all relationships concerning the trust idea. It can therefore be accepted that the trust in the narrow sense is \textit{species} of a trust in the wide sense.\textsuperscript{106} The distinction between trusts in the wide or narrow sense lies further in the nature of the public office that the trustee holds.\textsuperscript{107} The trustee of a trust in the narrow sense is appointed in terms of the trust deed, but its office is subject to the control of the Master of the High Court.\textsuperscript{108} The Master of the High Court is appointed as authority regarding trust property matters in terms of Section 6 of the \textit{Trust Act}.\textsuperscript{109} Certain trustees in the wide \textsuperscript{103} Du Toit \textit{South African Trust Law} 2; Smith \textit{The Authorization of Trustees} 42-44; Stafford \textit{A Legal-Comparative Study} 9.

---

\textsuperscript{104} Cameron \textit{et al} \textit{Honore's South African Law of Trusts} 3; Hoosen \textit{v Deedat} 1999 4 SA 425 (SCA); In \textit{Deedat \textit{v The Master}} 1995 2 SA 377 (A) the court held that the \textit{Trust Act} only acknowledges the trust in the narrow sense and therefore ruled that a verbal trust agreement did not form part of a trust in terms of the Act. In \textit{Conze \textit{v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers (Pty) Ltd}} 1996 3 SA 786 (C) the court had to decide whether the definition of a trust in the wide sense or the definition of a trust in the narrow sense, or both fall in the cadre of the definition of a trust as set out in the \textit{Trust Act}. The court ruled that the \textit{Trust Act} only acknowledges the trust in the narrow sense. This view was again confirmed in \textit{Louw \textit{v Investec Bank}} 2012 20, 41.

\textsuperscript{105} \textit{Conze \textit{v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers (Pty) Ltd}} 1996 3 SA 786 (C) 794D-E; Du Toit \textit{South African Trust Law} 2.

\textsuperscript{106} Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg \textit{Trustreg en Praktyk} 1-6.

\textsuperscript{107} Olivier, Strydom en Van Den Berg \textit{Trustreg en Praktyk} 1-6; Robbertse \textit{Going Beyond the Trust Veil} 9; Du Toit \textit{South African Trust Law} 3.

\textsuperscript{108} Section 6 of the \textit{Trust Act}.

\textsuperscript{109} Du Toit \textit{South African Trust Law} 3 - "The trustee of a trust in the narrow sense holds an office and is, as such, subject to control by the Master of the High Court and the High Court itself"; Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg \textit{Trustreg en Praktyk} 1-6 - Only a trust in sense, such as inter alia curators and tutors, also hold office under the control of the Master of the High Court, but in terms of legislation other than the Trust Act.\textsuperscript{110} Others such as agents can act unofficially.\textsuperscript{111} The difference between trust in the wide sense and trust in the narrow sense is firstly that the trustee does not become owner of the trust property\textsuperscript{112}, whereas in the latter instance the trustee does become owner of the trust property.\textsuperscript{113} In the next paragraph, the different notions of trusts in the South African private trust law is schematically portrayed, followed by a comprehensive discussion of the inter vivos trust in Paragraph 3.

---

\textsuperscript{110} For example the Administration of Estates Act 66 of 1965.

\textsuperscript{111} Du Toit South African Trust Law 3- “Trustees in the wide sense do hold office...others do not necessarily act in an official capacity.” The latter part of sec 1(b) of the Trust Act expressly excludes the following functionaries as trustees in the narrow sense in terms of the Trust Act namely tutors, executors and curators who are appointed in terms of the Administration of Estates Act 66 of 1965

\textsuperscript{112} Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 218; Du Toit South African Trust Law 3; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 5.

\textsuperscript{113} Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 219; Du Toit South African Trust Law 2; Pieters Eienaarskap van Trustbates 3; Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers (Pty) Ltd 1996 3 SA 786 (C) 794D-E; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 5.
3 The inter vivos trust

3.1 Introduction

The research question that underpins this study is whether, and if so- to what extent, the doctrine of public trust as envisaged in the White Paper and incorporated in the NWA can be compared to the inter vivos trust as provided for in the Trust Act.\(^{114}\) It is therefore necessary to analyse the legal figure known as the inter vivos trust. In the discussion that follows an attempt will be launched to find a proper definition for an inter vivos trust. Thereafter the legal nature of the inter vivos trust will be discussed and the characterising features of the institution will be highlighted. The essential elements for the creation of the inter vivos trust as well as the parties to the inter vivos trust will be investigated.

---

\(^{114}\) 57 of 1988 (herein after referred to as the Trust Act).

3.2 Defining the inter vivos trust

3.2.1 Introduction

It is not an easy task to find a definition for an inter vivos trust.\(^{115}\) Since this is a legal study, it is paramount to consult primary and secondary legal sources, which is done later on in this work. First, in order to determine how this legal notion is described or defined by the public, non-legal sources were consulted. In the modern era of internet, with search engines in ample availability, one tends to follow the easy route and rely on the World Wide Web\(^ {116} \) to ease this major task of finding a proper definition for an inter vivos trust. Once following this route, anyone with a moderate degree of knowledge about private law trusts will immediately find that although not all the results are in totality wrong, the definitions are offered in its most elementary state as \(^{115}\) Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 2; De Waal 2000 SALJ 548; Mthethwa The Common Law and Taxation of Trusts 8.

\(^{116}\) Searched on www.google.co.za for "definition for an inter vivos trust" – date of use 23 September 2016. The first 8 definitions’ in chronological order that was found is as follows: www.investopedia.com/terms/i/intervivostrust.asp - An inter vivos trust is a fiduciary relationship used in estate planning created during the lifetime of the trustor. www.sars.gov.za/ClientSegments/Business/Trusts/Pages/Types-of-Trust.aspx - Inter Vivos trust is created during the lifetime of a person. https://en.m.Wikipedia/wiki/Inter_Vivos (Latin, between the living) is a legal term referring to a transfer or gift made during one’s lifetime... https://www.resbank.co.za/EXCMAN - An inter vivos trust (between living persons) is created during a person’s lifetime... The trust operates like a conduit through which assets pass to the beneficiaries during the lifetime of the founder. https://www.thebalance.com/testamentary-vs-inter-vivos-trust-funds-357251 - living trusts, or inter vivos trusts as they are often called, are trusts formed during life. www.businessdictionary.com/definition/inter-vivos-trust.html - trust established by a living person for the benefit of another, such as a trust established by a parent for an offspring... www.law.freeadvice.com/estate_planning/trusts/inter vivos-trust.htm – Inter vivos trusts are simply trusts created while you are still alive. www.thelawdictionary.org/inter-vivos-trust/ - What is Inter Vivos Trust? – a Latin phrase that means living trust. www.dictionary.law.com/Default.aspx?selected=1013 – Inter vivos trust – a trust created by a writing (declaration of trust) which commences at that time, while the creator... is alive, sometimes called a "living trust". The property is then placed in trust with a trustee...and distribution will take place according to the terms of the trust.
these definitions focus generally on how the inter vivos trust is formed. If a definition cannot be found on the internet, the next instinctive step is to consult the dictionary. Keeping in mind that the initial aim is to determine the view of the public and that primary and secondary legal sources are consulted later on in this work, the Oxford Advanced Learner’s Dictionary\textsuperscript{117} was consulted first. This dictionary does offer an explanation for ‘trust’, namely:

An arrangement by which an organisation or a group of people has legal control of money or property that has been given to somebody, usually until that person reaches a particular age.

In addition to this, the Trilingual Legal Dictionary\textsuperscript{118} explains inter vivos as: “between the living; from one living person to another”. If these two explanations are combined, a layman’s definition for the term “inter vivos trust” can be created, namely the arrangement made between living people by which an organisation or a group of people has legal control of money or property that has been given to somebody, usually until that person reaches a particular age.

However, as the term functions as a known concept in private trust law, the true definition ought to be sought there. However, it is no easy task to derive at a legal definition for the term, even if works of academics, scholars and case-law are consulted.\textsuperscript{119}

3.2.2 Defining the inter vivos trust from a private law perspective

The notion of trust is explained in literature rather than defined.\textsuperscript{120} Paragraph 2.4.1 above explains that the inter vivos trust can be categorised as a trust in the narrow sense. As indicated, it is defined in the Trust Act\textsuperscript{121} as:

\begin{quote}
117 Turnbull et al Oxford Advanced Learner’s Dictionary 1601.
119 Hayley Equity and Trusts in a Nutshell 12; Oakly The Modern Law of Trusts 12; Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 2; De Waal 2000 SALJ 548.
120 Mthethwa The Common Law and Taxation of Trusts 8.
121 Section 1(a) of the Trust Act offers a definition for ‘trust’ in the narrow sense of which the trust inter vivos is a specie. Smith The Authorization of Trustees 4; Sher 2005 ISSN 77, Lamprecht Die Bestaansreg van ’n Besigheidtrust 5; Shrand Trusts in South Africa \end{quote}
the arrangement through which the ownership in property of one person is by virtue of a trust instrument made over or bequeathed to another person, the trustee, in whole or in part, to be administered or disposed of according to the provisions of the trust instrument for the benefit of the person or class of persons designated in the trust instrument or for the achievement of the object stated in the trust instrument.

Hayton\textsuperscript{122} gives a general definition for a trust as the legal relationship that was born in lifetime (\textit{inter vivos}) or on death (\textit{mortis causa}), by a person, the settlor, when assets have been placed under the control of a trustee for the benefit of a beneficiary or for a specific purpose. A custom definition for the \textit{inter vivos} trust can be derived from this general definition of a trust as: 'the legal relationship that comes into existence in the lifetime of the founder thereof, when assets have been placed under the control of a trustee by the founder for the benefit of a beneficiary or for a specific purpose'.\textsuperscript{123}

It is necessary to emphasise that the \textit{inter vivos} trust is only categorised as such because of how it formed\textsuperscript{124}. This explains why a generally accepted definition could not be found in literature or case law.\textsuperscript{125}

Some theorists\textsuperscript{126} are further of the opinion that the trust itself as an aggregate of assets constitutes a juristic person and that the assets of the trust that is controlled by the trustee, vests in the juristic person.\textsuperscript{127} This view was rejected by the South African courts.\textsuperscript{128} It was also confirmed in the \textit{Trust Act} 1988, Section 1: ‘A trust is an arrangement in which a person, the settlor, creates a trust to own or control property for the benefit of another person or class of persons designated in the trust instrument or for the achievement of the object stated in the trust instrument.\textsuperscript{129}

\textsuperscript{2} An author in the 1970’s was of the opinion that South African trusts was juridically interpreted according to whether they have been created \textit{mortis causa} (i.e as a testamentary provision) or \textit{inter vivos}.

\textsuperscript{122} Hayton \textit{The Law of Trusts} 7.

\textsuperscript{123} Writer’s hybrid definition.

\textsuperscript{124} Coetzee 2007 \textit{De Rebus} 126.

\textsuperscript{125} \textit{Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers} 1996 3 SA 786 (C) 794- A trust in the wide sense was described. It is, however, established above that the \textit{inter vivos} trust is a specie of the trust in the narrow sense. \textit{Tijmstra v Blunt-MacKenzie} 2002 1 SA 499 (T) 467H the court described the core idea of a trust and stated that it is codified in Section 1 of the \textit{Trust Act}, therefore describing the trust in the narrow sense. \textit{Khabola v Railtabo} 2011 SHC 62 4.

\textsuperscript{126} De Waal en Theron 1991 \textit{TSAR} 504.

\textsuperscript{127} Cameron \textit{et al} Honoré’s \textit{The South African Law of Trusts} 3.

\textsuperscript{128} Cameron \textit{et al} Honoré’s \textit{The South African Law of Trusts} 3; BOE Bank Ltd v Trustees, \textit{Knox Property Trust} 1999 1 SA 425 (D); \textit{CIR v Emary} 1961 2 SA 621 (A); \textit{CIR v...
Act that trust property vests in the trustee and not in the trust itself.\textsuperscript{129} Court cases\textsuperscript{130} confirm that:

The estate of a trust, like the estate of a deceased person, is an aggregate of assets and liabilities but not a juristic person.\textsuperscript{131}

Since the South African law does not recognise the trust as a \textit{legal persona}, legislation had to be adapted for purposes of the specific acts to recognise the trust as a legal \textit{persona}.\textsuperscript{132} Regardless of certain adaptations by legislation to incorporate a trust into the definition of a person, the legal position in South Africa regarding the \textit{legal persona} of a trust is unequivocally that a trust is not a juristic person.\textsuperscript{133}

\subsection*{3.3 The legal nature of the inter vivos trust}

The legal nature of an \textit{inter vivos} trust seems to be a mystery too. Initially, the courts tended to look at the interpretation of the \textit{inter vivos} trust from a law of contract perspective due to the presence of contractual parties.\textsuperscript{134} In the case

\begin{footnotesize}
\begin{itemize}
\item \textit{Macnellie's Estate} 1961 3 SA 833 (A) 840G-H; \textit{Lockhat's Estate v North British & Mercantile Insurance} 1959 3 SA 295 (A); \textit{Cilliers v Kuhn} 1975 3 SA 881 (NC); \textit{Clarkson v Gelb} 1981 1 SA 288 (W).
\item \textit{BOE Bank Ltd v Trustees, Knox Property Trust} 1999 1 SA 425 (D); \textit{CIR v Emary} 1961 2 SA 621 (A); \textit{CIR v Macnellie's Estate} 1961 3 SA 833 (A) 840G-H; \textit{Lockhat's Estate v North British & Mercantile Insurance} 1959 3 SA 295 (A); \textit{Cilliers v Kuhn} 1975 3 SA 881 (NC); \textit{Clarkson v Gelb} 1981 1 SA 288 (W).
\item Cameron et al Honoré's \textit{The South African Law of Trusts} 5; De Waal 1993 \textit{THRHR} 1.
\item As a result of the court judgement in \textit{CIR v Friedman} 1993 1 SA 353 (A) 370I, the \textit{Income Tax Act} 58 of 1962 was amended to provide for purposes of Income Tax matters that the definition of a "person" in the act also included a trust. As a result of another court judgement namely \textit{Mkangeli v Joubert} 2002 4 SA 36 (SCA) Section 102 of the \textit{Transfer Duty Act} 47 of 1937 was amended to the extent that in transfer duty matters the definition of a "person" in the act also included a trust. In the \textit{Companies Act} 71 of 2008, which was promulgated in 2011, a trust is included in the reference to juristic person for purposes of matters pertaining to the \textit{Companies Act}. The definition of a person in Section 1 of the \textit{Value Added Tax Act} 89 of 1991 was written as such that a trust can also register in terms of the Act as a VAT vendor; Pieters \textit{Eienaarskap van Trustbates} 7.
\item Olivier and Van den Bergh \textit{Praktiese Boedel Beplanning} 61.
\item \textit{Van der Plank v Otto} 1912 AD 353, Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 98.
\end{itemize}
\end{footnotesize}
of CIR v Estate Crewe\textsuperscript{135}, the court referred to the work of Pollock and Maitland The History of English Law,\textsuperscript{136} where it was remarked that:

\[\ldots\text{the complex relations involved in trusts cannot be reduced to the ordinary elements of contract. Trust in fact is a legal category sui generis}.\]

Despite of the reference to the contribution of Pollock and Maitland that the trust is a legal institution sui generis, Judge Watermeyer still found that the law of contract, and more specifically stipulatio alterii, could be utilised to aid in trust problems.\textsuperscript{137} It has to be kept in mind that Judge Watermeyer could not find fault with the preceding court precedents\textsuperscript{138}, which stipulate that the inter vivos trust is akin to a stipulatio alterii. He therefore stayed bound to it.\textsuperscript{139} In Crookes v Watson\textsuperscript{140}, the court confirmed the existence of the inter vivos trust as a trust figure in the South African law, but held it to be still akin to a stipulatio alterii.\textsuperscript{141} In the High court case of Hofer v Kevitt\textsuperscript{142} the court had another opportunity to find the inter vivos trust a sui generis legal institution. However, Judge Van Coller ruled that the Crookes v Watson\textsuperscript{143}-finding that the inter vivos trust is akin to a stipulatio alterii still stands. Kerr\textsuperscript{144} and Coetzee\textsuperscript{145} do not support the view of the court in Crookes v Watson.\textsuperscript{146} They argue that the stipulatio alterii as a Roman-Dutch law concept constitute the structure of a contract for the benefit of a third. However, for a true stipulatio alterii to exist; A should enter into an agreement with B for the benefit of C. Until C accepts the benefits, the agreement only exists between A and B. After C accepts the benefits, B is removed from the picture and the agreement

\textsuperscript{135} CIR v Estate Crewe 1943 AD 656.
\textsuperscript{136} Pollock and Maitland The History of English Law 205.
\textsuperscript{137} Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 99.
\textsuperscript{138} Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD 491.
\textsuperscript{139} Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 99; Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustee 19 – it is Olivier’s view that this forced entitlement of a trust as a stipulatio alterii hopefully will be proven wrong in future.
\textsuperscript{140} Crookes v Watson 1956 1 SA 277 (A) 285F; also see Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD 491.
\textsuperscript{141} Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte 80.
\textsuperscript{142} Hofer v Kevitt 1998 1 SA 382 (SCA).
\textsuperscript{143} Crookes v Watson 1956 1 SA 277 (A) 285F.
\textsuperscript{144} Kerr 1958 SALJ 84.
\textsuperscript{145} Coetzee 2007 De Rebus 29.
\textsuperscript{146} Crookes v Watson 1956 1SA 277 (A) 285F.
continues between A and C. In the case of a private law trust, the trustees do not cease to be part of the contract when the beneficiaries accept their benefits. In addition, Van der Westhuizen pointed out the different opinions of case law by referring to two recent Supreme Court of Appeal judgements in terms of which the courts had different views concerning the legal nature of the inter vivos trust. In the matter of Potgieter v Potgieter, the issues before court concerned the legality of the variation of an inter vivos trust deed and not the legal nature of the inter vivos trust. The court remarked that:

...a trust deed executed by a founder and trustees of a trust for the benefit of others is akin to a contract for the benefit of a third party, also known as stipulatio alterii.

In the unreported case of WT & Others v KT, the main question that the court was concerned with was whether an inter vivos trust was the alter ego of the trustee or not. In this case the court remarked the following: “It is also accepted in our law that the concept of a trust is strictly speaking sui generis.” Based on the views of courts who seemingly haven’t reached consensus with regard to the legal nature of an inter vivos trust, authors like Van der Westhuizen are of the opinion that the courts are not yet done with developing this particular term in the South African trust law.

---

147 Kerr 1958 SALJ 85.
148 Anon 2015 http://trustguru.co.za/Learn_about_Trusts.html; Kerr 1958 SALJ 86 submitted that the question regarding if an inter vivos trust resembles a stipulatio alterii may be resolved if the notion consists of two contracts. The first contract is between the founder and the trustee. The second contract falls in place when dominium in the property is transferred from the founder to the trustee in terms of which contract, the duty then arises on the trustee to give the property to the beneficiary on the date or event that the founder determined. Also see CIR v Estate Crewe 1943 AD 656 where the court states “Except for the fact that lady Crewe was both a beneficiary and a trustee, the beneficiaries were not parties to the contract”.
149 Van der Westhuizen “What every attorney should know about trusts” 143.
150 Potgieter v Potgieter 2012 1 SA 637 (SCA) 18.
151 Potgieter v Potgieter 2012 1 SA 637 (SCA) 18.
154 Van der Westhuizen “What every attorney should know about trusts” 143; Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees 19.
155 Van der Westhuizen “What every attorney should know about trusts” 143; Honoré The South African Law of Trusts 6; Cameron et al Honore’s South African Law of Trusts 1;
The current authority pertaining to the legal nature of the inter vivos trust is therefore that it is akin to a stipulatio alterii as confirmed in Crookes v Watson\(^\text{156}\).

3.4 Creation of the inter vivos trust

3.4.1 Essential elements for creating the inter vivos trust

An inter vivos trust comes into existence with an agreement in which all the essential elements for the creation of a valid trust are present.\(^\text{157}\) However, there are different opinions regarding the requirements that constitute the essentialia for the legal creation of a trust.\(^\text{158}\) In Khabola v Ralitabo,\(^\text{159}\) Judge Moloi tested the facts of the case against the definition of a trust as contemplated in Section 1 of the Trust Act to determine if a trust was indeed a trust in terms of the trust law.\(^\text{160}\) Vorster and Coetzee\(^\text{161}\) do not agree with the \(^{156}\) Crookes v Watson 1956 1 SA 277 (A) 285F.

\(^{157}\) Blignaut Curbing the Abuse of Trusts 32 states that "The office of trustee is created by the trust deed. The trustees are then appointed in terms of the trust deed by the Master of the High Court, upon which they will then accept the appointment as trustee." Van der Merwe v Van der Merwe 2000 2 SA 519 (C) S22H – the court held that "there was a manifest difference between the 'appointment' of a trustee (which took place by virtue of the trust deed) and the 'authorization' to act as trustee (which was granted by the Master as required by Section 6(1) of the Act); Also see Lupacchini v Minister of Safety and Security 2010 (SCA) 108 3; Botha et al Financial Planning Handbook 2013 815; Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg Trustreg en Praktyk 2-5; Honoré The South African Law of Trusts 35; Du Toit South African Trust Law 7; Mthethwa The Common Law and Taxation of Trusts 9.

\(^{159}\) Khabola v Ralitabo 2011 SHC 62 4.

\(^{160}\) In the case of Khabola v Ralitabo 2011 SHC 62 4 the court dealt with a matter where the trust deed founded the trust. However, no beneficiaries were appointed in the trust deed. The court found that "the parties intended to form a partnership or some or other association which was simulated as a trust." The court further stated that the definition of a trust in the Trust Act must be considered when deciding whether a trust exists or not. In this particular matter the business relationship that existed did not constitute a trust because it did not fit into the definition of a trust as stipulated in the Trust Act due to inter alia the lack of beneficiaries.

\(^{161}\) Vorster and Coetzee 2015 PER 1801.
court’s approach. They support the view of other authors\textsuperscript{162} that the validity of a private law trust can be measured against the following essential elements:

- The intention of the founder to create a trust
- The object of the trust must be clearly stated and lawful
- The trust property must be defined with certainty
- The trust property must be “made over” to trustees
- The beneficiaries must be ascertained or ascertainable, or the impersonal object must be clearly defined.

A discussion of the abovementioned essential elements underlying the creation of a valid \textit{inter vivos} trust follows in the paragraphs below.

3.4.1.1 Intention of the founder to create a trust

Before it can be said that an \textit{inter vivos} trust has been created, there must be a clear indication that the ‘founder’ of the trust intended to create a trust.\textsuperscript{163} According to Du Toit\textsuperscript{164}, the use of words like “trust” or “trustee” can indicate an intention to create a trust, but must not be the decisive factor on whether the intention existed to create a trust.\textsuperscript{165} The intention to constitute an \textit{inter vivos} trust must be expressed in a contract, court order, statute or treaty.\textsuperscript{166} According to Cameron et al\textsuperscript{167}, it does not matter whether the intention is unilateral, like a statute or court order, or bilateral like a contract or treaty, it just has to create an obligation on either the trustee to administer the property for the trust object, or place an obligation on the founder to transfer the property to the trustee. An \textit{inter vivos} trust can be created by means of a verbal agreement, to which the common law will apply and not the Trust Act.\(^{168}\) This will result in the trust being regarded as a trust in the wide sense because the Trust Act does not apply to it. However, an inter vivos trust “cannot be created unintentionally because the English-law mechanisms of resulting and constructive trusts have not been received into South African law.”\(^{169}\)

3.4.1.2 The object of the trust must be clearly stated and lawful

A clearly stated and lawful trust object\(^{170}\) and established obligations must be set out in the trust deed\(^{171}\) to prescribe how the trust goods must be utilised.\(^{172}\) If the trust was created by means of a verbal agreement, it will be governed by the common law, which automatically includes that it has to adhere to the boni mores. A trust object will be unlawful if it is illegal, against public policy or contra bones mores.\(^{173}\)

3.4.1.3 The trust property must be defined with certainty

Trust property can be movable, immovable, corporeal and incorporeal. Trust property is identified in the trust instrument.\(^{174}\) According to Du Toit\(^{175}\):

> Any asset that can be held in ownership and that can be converted into money if liquidated can constitute trust property.

A clear indication of what the trust property entails must exist for the trustees to take control of it.\(^{176}\)

---

168 Du Toit South African Trust Law 29; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 10.
169 Cameron Honore’s South African Law of Trusts 117.
170 Referring to the main purpose of the foundation of the trust.
172 Geach and Yeats Trusts: Law and Practice 42-44.
173 Du Toit South African Trust Law 32; Cameron Honore’s The South African Law of Trusts 129.
174 Du Toit South African Trust Law 30; in Harter v Epstein 1953 1 SA 287 (A) the court found that if the purpose of the trust is not defined with certainty, the trust will cease to exist.
175 Du Toit South African Trust Law 30; Cameron Honore’s The South African Law of Trusts 1; Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg Trustreg en Praktyk 1-8.
176 Vorster and Coetzee 2015 PER 1801.
3.4.1.4 The trust property must be “made over” to trustees

For a trustee to administer a trust, it is self-evident that the trustee must be vested with the trust property or acquires control over such property.\(^\text{177}\) Therefore, there has to be an enforceable obligation on the founder to make over the trust property to the trustees.\(^\text{178}\) Du Toit\(^\text{179}\) is of the opinion that the presence of a duly appointed trustee who has accepted such an appointment is not an essential to the creation of a valid trust. However, a binding obligation does exist.

3.4.1.5 The beneficiaries must be ascertained or ascertainable, or the impersonal object must be clearly defined

The beneficiaries must be ascertained or ascertainable, or the impersonal object must be clearly defined to indicate on whose behalf the trust property is managed.\(^\text{180}\) In Khabola v Ralitabo\(^\text{181}\) the court pointed out that the Trust Act does not offer a definition for trust beneficiary. Vorster and Coetzee\(^\text{182}\) are of the opinion that it is important that the courts develop this shortcoming in trust law.

Further to the above essential elements to create a valid inter vivos trust, the Trust Act also prescribes certain formalities for the commencement of the administration of a trust. An example of such formalities is that a copy of the trust deed must be lodged with the Master and that the trustees of the trust must be duly authorised to act in terms of letters of authority issued by the Master.\(^\text{183}\) Du Toit\(^\text{184}\) is, however, of the opinion that the essential elements for the formation of a valid trust is far more significant that the prescribed formalities for the commencement of the administration of a trust.

\(^{177}\) Du Toit South African Trust Law 35.
\(^{178}\) Vorster and Coetzee 2015 PER 1801; s 11 of the Trust Act.
\(^{179}\) Du Toit South African Trust Law 34.
\(^{180}\) Lamprecht Die Bestaansreg van ’n Besigheidstrust 7.
\(^{181}\) Khabola v Ralitabo 2011 SHC 62 4.
\(^{182}\) Vorster and Coetzee 2015 PER 1805.
\(^{184}\) Du Toit South African Trust Law 27.
3.4.2 Parties to an inter vivos trust

A statutory inter vivos trust has a tripartite nature that consists of a creator, who carries over his or her assets (the trust property) to another party (the trustee), who is appointed the duty to manage and protect the assets on behalf of a third party (the beneficiary).185

3.4.2.1 The creator or founder

The creator or founder (sometimes also called the settlor or donor) is the party who establishes the trust by handing over the property or control over it to the trustee(s) with the intent to form a trust for the benefit of a third party.186 In the case of an ownership trust, property is handed over to the trustee(s) for the benefit of the trust beneficiaries, with the trustee keeping control over the property. In the case of the bewind trust, property is handed over to the beneficiaries with the trustee keeping control over it. Any natural or legal person(s) who has the competency to enter into a contractual agreement can establish an inter vivos trust as the founder(s).187 It is also possible that a trust can have more than one founder.188 Another significant role of the founder is that it can play an important role in the amendment of the trust deed if the need arises.189

186 Botha et al Financial Planning Handbook 2013 817; Du Toit South African Trust Law 4; Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg Trustreg en Praktyk 2-3; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 25 – identified an additional party to a trust namely the Nominee Settlor and explains as follows: “The nominee settlor is the agent of the true settlor. This person is therefore usually someone approached by the settlor to form the trust in their own name who is given instructions as to what the trust instrument should contain. A nominee settlor is usually used in instances where the true settlor wishes to detach him- or herself from the ownership of the trust. Thus the nominee settlor’s name would appear on a trust instrument and, after the initial donation, then disappears. It is submitted that this strategy is unnecessary and a court would most likely, if required, look through the formality and hold the principal settlor to be the true settlor of the trust.”
187 Lamprecht Die Bestaansreg van ’n Besigheidstrust 7; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 25.
188 Lamprecht Die Bestaansreg van ’n Besigheidstrust 7; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 25.
189 Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 26.
3.4.2.2 The trustee / trustees

In terms of Section 1 of the Trust Act, a trustee can be any person, including the founder of the trust.\(^{190}\) A trustee can be a natural or legal person.\(^{191}\) In the Metequity Ltd-case\(^ {192}\) one of the arguments that the defendants raised was that, on the basis of the fiduciary duties that are imposed on the trustees by Section 9 of the Trust Act, only a natural person can be a trustee as only natural persons can comply with the bestowed fiduciary duties. The court held that corporations act through their officials and that duties imposed upon corporations necessarily have to be carried out by natural persons acting on their behalf.\(^ {193}\) The court held that the argument carried no merit. The office of the trustee is created in the trust instrument and is then filed according to the prescribed terms of the trust instrument with the Master of the High Court.\(^ {194}\) The trustee(s) must formally accept the appointment.\(^ {195}\) The trust deed stipulates the scope of the trustee's rights and obligations in terms of the administration of the trust.\(^ {196}\) As soon as a person accepts the office of trustee, a fiduciary relationship comes into existence between the trust beneficiary and the trustee.\(^ {197}\) In terms of this relationship, the trustee will administrate the trust affairs and assets for and on behalf of the beneficiary for the benefit of the beneficiary and not for the trustees own benefit.\(^ {198}\) A person appointed as a trustee of an inter vivos trust is therefore a natural or legal person entrusted with the power to act on behalf of another with great trust, honesty and loyalty, and must act in the best interest of the beneficiaries and must set aside their own personal motives in favour of the beneficiaries.\(^ {199}\)

---

190 Pieters Eienaarskap van Trustbates 8; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 25
191 Metequity Ltd v NWN Properties Ltd 1998 (2) SA 554 (T) 556J-557A-B
192 Metequity Ltd v NWN Properties Ltd 1998 (2) SA 554 (T)
193 Metequity Ltd v NWN Properties Ltd 1998 (2) SA 554 (T)556J-557A-B
194 Du Toit 2007 STELL LR 3 470
195 Du Toit 2007 STELL LR 3 470
196 Du Toit 2007 STELL LR 3 469
197 De Waal 1998 TSAR 329
198 Jordaan v Jordaan 2001 3 SA 288 (K) para 25 and 26 on 299G-300C-D
199 Kloppers 2006 TSAR 414-421; also see Section 9(1) of the Trust Act. Garber Date Unknown http://www.wills.about.com/od/choosingfiduciaries/a/whatisafid.html -define a fiduciary as an individual, corporation or association holding assets for another party, often with legal authority and the obligation to make financial decisions on behalf of the other party; Also see Anon 2013 http://www.Investorwords.com/1932/fiduciary.html.
3.4.2.2.1 Trustee’s fiduciary duties

The paragraphs above investigated the notion of trust as it is used in different contexts in the South African law. A common denominator that features in all the different notions of trust is the fiduciary duty that rests firmly upon the trustee of any notion of trust.\textsuperscript{200} Heher JA\textsuperscript{201} assert that “there is no magic in the term ‘fiduciary duty’” and that:

The essential requirement for the establishment of a fiduciary duty is that one party must stand towards another in a position of confidence and good faith which he is obliged to protect.\textsuperscript{202}

Subsequently, this work draws the focus to the \textit{inter vivos} trust and therefore the fiduciary duties of trustees in the narrow sense are investigated. In Section 9(1) of the \textit{Trust Act}, the “common-law” standard for duty of care for trustees is incorporated and stated as follows:\textsuperscript{203}

A trustee shall, in the performance of his duties and the exercise of his powers, act with the care, diligence and skill which can reasonably be expected of a person who manages the affairs of another.

According to Kloppers\textsuperscript{204}, a trustee’s fiduciary obligations to the trust beneficiaries are confirmed in Section 9(1) of the \textit{Trust Act}. It is fitting to

\begin{itemize}
\item \textsuperscript{200} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 472; Phillips v Fieldstone Africa (Pty) Ltd 2004 1 All SA 150 (SCA) 159e-g; Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Rege 350 –the development of the idea of a fiduciary relationship is the view of the general public that historically certain relationships exists due to a relationship of good faith between parties- \textit{Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker} 2005 2 SA 77 (SCA) 86.
\item \textsuperscript{201} Phillips v Fieldstone Africa (Pty) Ltd 2004 1 All SA 150 (SCA) 159E
\item \textsuperscript{202} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 472; Phillips v Fieldstone Africa (Pty) Ltd 2004 1 All SA 150 (SCA) 159E-G; Hill and Hill 2005 http://www.legaldictionarythefreedictionary.co/ fiduciary, states that fiduciary from the Latin word \textit{fiducia} means "trust". In a private trust concept, it means the trust that one party (the beneficiary) puts in the other party (the trustee) who handles the trust property in total trust, good faith and honesty. In Anon 2010 http://www.businessdictionary.com/definition/fiduciaryrelationship.html Justice Benjamin Nathan Cardazo (1870-1938), an US Supreme court judge from 1932 to 1938 described a fiduciary relationship as "something more than the ordinary honour of the market place...the very punctilio of honesty and forthrightness".
\item \textsuperscript{203} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 473.
\item \textsuperscript{204} Kloppers 2006 \textit{TSAR} 414-421; De Waal 1998 \textit{TSAR} 326-330 is of the opinion that Section 9(1) of the \textit{Trust Act} encapsulates the "essence of a trustee’s fiduciary duty to mention that the fiduciary duties that rest upon trustees of the trust in the wide sense stem from common-law principles and court precedents. However, in Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker, the court found that the essential elements of trusteeship arising from the basic idea of the trust are not just restricted to a trustee’s duty of care. South African courts have developed the trustee’s fiduciary duty beyond the extent of the English duty of loyalty strictu sensu. Du Toit submits that a trustee in terms of the South African trust law is under a single fiduciary duty and points out that it can be called a general fiduciary duty. He also sees "this general fiduciary duty as multi-faceted comprised of a number of specific component duties".

From the “core idea of a trust”, further fiduciary duties can be identified and in Du Toit’s view they can be seen as “further components of a trustee’s general fiduciary duty.” The first component of a trustee’s general fiduciary duty is the duty of care. The trustee as bonus et diligens paterfamilias exercises trust administration with utmost good faith and in the interest of the trust beneficiaries. Du Toit mentions that a direct or even an exclusive link between the duties of care to a trustee’s general fiduciary duty may have merit. He further submits that this is only one component of a trustee’s general fiduciary duty, although the most significant. When it comes to trust administration, the most fundamental prescript on what is expected of a

---

205 Phillips v Fieldstone Africa (Pty) Ltd 2004 1 All SA 150 (SCA) 159E-G; According to Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 472-473 “from a trust law perspective, an analysis of case law reveals that South African courts have extended a trustee’s fiduciary duty beyond the ambit of English law’s duty of loyalty strictu sensu;” also see Du Toit South African Trust Law 72.

206 Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker 2004 4 All SA 261 (SCA) 267G.

207 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 473.

208 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 473.

209 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 475.

210 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 473.

211 Doyle v Board of Directors 1999 2 SA 805 (C) 813B; Daewoo Heavy Industries (SA) (Pty) Ltd v Banks 2004 2 All SA 530 (C) 533c; Jowell v Bramwell-Jones 1998 1 SA 836 (W) 891B 894E; Bafokeng Tribe v Impala Platinum Ltd 1999 3 SA 517 (BHC) 545J-546A; Nel v Metequity Ltd 2007 3 SA 34 (SCA) 38G; Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 472.

212 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 474.

213 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 474; Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker 2004 4 All SA 261 (SCA) 267G.
trustee, highlights the duty of care. The second component of a trustee’s general fiduciary duty is the duty of impartiality. The trustee is obliged to act impartially, which entails avoiding a conflict of interest between a trustee’s personal affairs and those of the beneficiaries. It also prohibits a trustee from any undue profit making from his office as trustee. Thirdly, the duty of independent judgement over trust administration can be identified as a component of a trustee’s general fiduciary duty. The trustee must exercise independent judgement in respect of trust affairs “by not slavishly follow[ing] the lead of the trust founder, his co-trustees or the trust beneficiaries.” Fourthly, the trustee’s duty to maintain proper accounts pertaining to trust administration forms part of a trustee’s general fiduciary duty. This is catalysed by the trustee’s compliance and due exercise of his duty to act impartially and to keep his personal property apart from trust property.

Since the South African trust law is young and it is still in a state of continuous development by the courts, the aforementioned fiduciary duties of trustees are not fixed and may develop additions to the components of the trustee’s general fiduciary duty of care in future.

214 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 472 – this was also confirmed in Metequity Ltd v NWN Properties Ltd 1998 2 SA 554 (T) 55611-J where the court found that a trustee’s general fiduciary duty is equivalent to the duty of care.

215 Rahman Defining the Concept Fiduciary Duty 29; Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 475.

216 Jowell v Bramwell-Jones 1998 1 SA 836 (W) 284G-285A – “A trustee must, generally speaking, avoid as far as possible a conflict of interest between her personal interest and those of the beneficiaries...... I am satisfied that the allegations contained in the particulars of claim are capable of supporting evidence which would establish a breach of trustee’s fiduciary duty”. In Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker 2004 4 All SA 261 (SCA) 267B – Cameron JA stated that “an identity of interest...is inimical to the trust idea...”

217 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 475.

218 Tijmstra v Blunt-Mackenzie 2002 1 SA 459 (T) 474E-F; Hoppen v Shub 1987 3 SA 201 (C) 217C–217G; African Bank Ltd v Weiner 2003 4 All SA 50 (C) 54B-E; Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker 2004 4 All SA 261 (SCA) – acknowledged it as an essential of trusteeship stemming from the “core idea” of the trust. Also see Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 475.

219 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 475.

220 Doyle v Board of Directors 1999 2 SA 805 (C) 813G; s 10 of the Trust Act prescribes the opening of a separate trust bank account; s 11 of the Trust Act regulates the registration and identification of trust property.

221 Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil 19.

222 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 476; Howard v Herrigel 1991 2 SA 660 (A) 678B-C; Ghersi v Tiber Developments (Pty) Ltd 2007 4 SA 536 (SCA) 544H-545B.
3.4.2.3 The beneficiary / beneficiaries

The beneficiary or beneficiaries of an inter vivos trust are those natural or legal persons who benefit under the terms of the trust instrument. Trust beneficiaries are not required to have contractual or legal capacity. A trustee may also be a beneficiary. Beneficiaries' rights, either discretionary or vested, derive from the trust instrument. For a trust to exist, it must have at least one beneficiary. A trust can have income and capital beneficiaries, or a combination of both. Another distinction between beneficiaries is that the trust deed can provide for beneficiaries to have vested rights or a mere contingent right in the trust property.

Du Toit describes the distinction between the vested and contingent rights of beneficiaries to trust property as follows:

A trust beneficiary who, in terms of the trust instrument at hand, enjoys an immediate entitlement to trust benefits (whether income and/or capital), is vested with a personal right to claim payment of such benefits from the trust’s trustee when it becomes distributable. If on the other hand, a trust instrument provides that a trust beneficiary’s acquisition of a personal right to claim payment of trust benefits is not immediate, but rather contingent or conditional upon the occurrence of an uncertain future event, a personal right to claim trust benefits will only vest in such beneficiary if and when the contingency has taken place or the condition has been fulfilled.

---

223 Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 32 – a trust beneficiary can be any person whether born, unborn, natural or juristic persons.
224 Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 32.
225 The Master v Edgecombe’s Executors 1910 TS 263,274.
227 Botha et al Financial Planning Handbook 2013 822; Du Toit South African Trust Law 6; In the case of Khabola v Railabo 2011 SHC 62 4 no beneficiaries were appointed in the trust deed. The court found that the intention was to form a partnership instead of a trust due to inter alia the lack of beneficiaries.
229 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 476-477; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 34; Geach and Yeats Trusts: Law and Practice 120.
230 Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 476-477.
231 Also see Cameron et al Honore’s South African Law of Trusts 558; Jowell v Bramwell-Jones 1998 1 SA 836 (W) 872G-H; Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 477 “A contingent trust beneficiary enjoys a personal right against the trust’s trustee for proper trust administration as counterpart to such trustee’s fiduciary duty.”
The trust instrument determines when a trust beneficiary acquires the right to claim trust benefits.\textsuperscript{232} A trust beneficiary, who enjoys an immediate entitlement to either income trust benefits or capital trust benefits or both has a vested personal right to claim such benefits from the trustee when it becomes distributable.\textsuperscript{233} A trust beneficiary who will acquire a personal right to claim income trust benefits or capital trust benefits or both upon the occurrence of an uncertain future event, only has a contingent right to claim trust benefits and is often called a contingent or potential beneficiary.\textsuperscript{234} Every trust beneficiary enjoys a personal right against the trustee or trustees for the due administration of the trust in accordance with the rules of his fiduciary office, regardless of whether such beneficiary, being a capital or income beneficiary, has a personal right or not.\textsuperscript{235} When holding a vested right in trust property, such a trust beneficiary can generally institute “the full complement of beneficiary remedies” at his disposal to protect his trust interest.\textsuperscript{236} A contingent trust beneficiary’s available remedies against the trustees and third parties are restricted and are mostly founded on the beneficiary’s personal right against the trustee for due and proper trust administration.\textsuperscript{237} The two Gross-decisions\textsuperscript{238} make is clear that the delictual remedy \textit{actio legis Aquiliae} is only available to the trust beneficiary who holds a vested right to trust benefits. A contingent beneficiary is therefore disqualified from using the \textit{Aquilian}-action against a trustee in terms of the absence of \textit{locus standi}.\textsuperscript{239} Olivier\textsuperscript{240} is of the opinion that the \textit{Aquilian}-action should be available to a contingent beneficiary and that the contingent beneficiary’s \textit{locus standi} to institute the \textit{Aquilian} action is due to his “vested interest against the trustee for the trust to be properly administered”. The two Gross-cases\textsuperscript{241} remain the

\begin{thebibliography}{99}
\bibitem{DuToit2007StellLR477} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 477.
\bibitem{DuToit2007StellLR477} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 477.
\bibitem{DuToit2007StellLR477StaffordALegalComparativeStudy33} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 477; Stafford \textit{A Legal-Comparative Study} 33.
\bibitem{DuToit2007StellLR477DoylevBoardofDirectors19992SA805C} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 477; Doyle \textit{v Board of Directors} 1999 \textit{2 SA} 805 (C); Gross \textit{v Pentz} 1996 \textit{4 SA} 617 (A).
\bibitem{DuToit2007StellLR478} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 478.
\bibitem{DuToit2007StellLR478} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 478.
\bibitem{PentzvGross19962SA518C523AandGrossvPentz19964SA617A626H1} Pentz \textit{v Gross} 1996 \textit{2 SA} 518 (C) 523A and Gross \textit{v Pentz} 1996 \textit{4 SA} 617 (A) 626H-I.
\bibitem{DuToit2007StellLR473} Du Toit 2007 \textit{Stell LR} 473.
\bibitem{OlivierStrydomenVandenBergTrustregenPraktyk101} Olivier, Strydom en Van den Berg \textit{Trustreg en Praktyk} 101.
\bibitem{PentzvGross19962SA518CandGrossvPentz19964SA617A} Pentz \textit{v Gross} 1996 \textit{2 SA} 518 (C) and Gross \textit{v Pentz} 1996 \textit{4 SA} 617 (A).
\end{thebibliography} authority on the fact that only a beneficiary with a vested right may institute the *actio legis Aquiliae.*²⁴²

Given the information provided above, the paragraph below offers a summary of the work so far.

3.5 Summary

The aspects and properties outlined above define and characterise inter vivos private law trusts. A trust is a legal institution that facilitates a unique relationship of legal ownership and use of property. The defining characteristic of this relationship is that the owner of the property does not benefit from the use of the property, but deals with the property exclusively and in a fiduciary manner in favour of the beneficiary or beneficiaries.²⁴³

The trust institution was at first foreign to South African law, which is primarily based on common law principles of Roman-Dutch law. The English law predominantly influenced the South African trust law. This bears testimony to the mixed nature of the South African legal system.²⁴⁴

The South African trust idea was developed over the years by case law and common law principles.²⁴⁵ Since 1989, certain issues pertaining to trust administration were codified, resulting in the promulgation of the Trust Act, which now forms part of the South African trust law.²⁴⁶

The notion of trust has been found to exist in different contexts in the South African law. The general notion of trust broadly speaking can be divided into trust in the wide sense and the trust in the narrow sense.²⁴⁷ The trust in the narrow sense is defined in Section 1(a) of the Trust Act. The trust in the ²⁴² Du Toit 2007 Stell LR 481.

---

²⁴³ Par 2.1 above.
²⁴⁴ Par 2.2.1 above.
²⁴⁵ Par 2.2.2 above.
²⁴⁶ Par 2.3 above.
²⁴⁷ Par 2.4 above.
narrow sense can be found in the instance where property is transferred by the founder of the trust to the trustees for the benefit of a third party or for an impersonal object. The notion of the trust in the narrow sense is also governed by the Trust Act. Trusts in the narrow sense are described according to the way they are formed. A mortis causa trust comes into existence by means of the last will of the testator upon his or her death, while an inter vivos trust is formed during the life of the founder. An important aspect of the trust institution in the narrow sense is that the trust property vests in the trustee, but it is held in a separate estate. It does not become part of the trustee's personal estate. The trustee of the trust in the narrow sense holds an official office in terms of the Trust Act. The principle characteristic of the office of trustee in the narrow sense is that it has a fiduciary nature. Trust in the wide sense describes any legal arrangement between a functionary and another person with regard to the control and administration of an impersonal object. This type of trust is not governed by the Trust Act, but mainly by common law principles and case law. A common characteristic of a trust in the wide sense is that it is typified by a fiduciary relationship in terms of which the functionary is obliged to act in utmost good faith towards the beneficiary or beneficiaries.

Finding a proper definition of the inter vivos trust is not an easy task. The Trust Act, case law and authors offer a definition for a trust in the general narrow sense, but not specifically for the inter vivos trust. This is due to the fact that the inter vivos trust is a specie of the trust as defined in the Trust Act and is named an inter vivos trust only because of the way it is formed. Some scholars argue that a trust constitutes a juristic person. However, even though certain legislation was adapted to include a trust into the definition of a person, the South African position in trust law is that a trust is not a juristic person.

---

248 Par 2.4.1 above.
249 Par 2.4.2 above.
250 Par 3.2 above.
Apart from the uncertainty pertaining to the definition of the inter vivos trust, there are many different views on the legal nature of the inter vivos trust. The view of some academics is that the inter vivos trust should be classified as an institution sui generis. Another view is that the inter vivos trust is akin to a stipilatio alterii and even though it is widely criticised, it still remains the current precedent of the courts.\(^{251}\)

There are different essential elements that have to be in place before an inter vivos trust can come into existence. The following essential elements must be present to ascertain the validity of a private law trust namely:

- The intention of the founder to create a trust
- The object of the trust must be clearly stated and lawful
- The trust property must be defined with certainty
- The trust property must be “made over” to trustees
- The beneficiaries must be ascertained or ascertainable, or the impersonal object must be clearly defined.\(^{252}\)

The parties to the inter vivos trust were also identified. The inter vivos trust has a tripartite nature that consists of a founder, trustee and beneficiary.\(^{253}\) The founder transfers property or control of the property to the trustees with the intention to form a trust. Any natural or juristic person can be the founder of an inter vivos trust.\(^{254}\) In all notions of 'trust', an overarching characteristic is the fiduciary duty that is bestowed on the trustee or functionary of the trust relationship. The South African law classifies four main fiduciary obligations imposed upon a trustee namely:

- the duty of care
- the duty of impartiality
- the duty of independent judgement over trust administration
- the duty of accountability

\(^{251}\) Par 3.3 above.
\(^{252}\) Par 3.4.1 above.
\(^{253}\) Par 3.4.2 above.
\(^{254}\) Par 3.4.2.1 above.
The abovementioned fiduciary duties may get more additions due to the developing and young nature of the South African trust law. The beneficiaries of the inter vivos trust were identified. A beneficiary can be either a natural or a juristic person. A trust must have at least one beneficiary in order to exist.

The main themes of the inter vivos trust in the South African trust law is now clearly summarised. The study continues with an examination of whether the statutorily introduced public trust as envisaged in the White Paper and enclosed in the NWA can be compared to the inter vivos trust.

4 The public trust in South African water law

Piloted by the Constitution, the White Paper proposed and the NWA effected the stipulation that national government shall be appointed as the public trustee of all the nations' natural water resources. National government shall exercise its powers as trustee within a public trust. It is paramount to understand the notion of public trusteeship as it emanates in the NWA "to fully comprehend the legal nature of water in the current water regulatory regime." Judge Froneman in the minority decision in the Agri SA-case stated that he is of the opinion that this entirely new concept of state custodianship has not been thoroughly examined in terms of what this novel concept of state custodianship holds for our law. The same holds for public...

---

255 Par 3.4.2.2.1 above.
256 Par 3.4.2.3 above.
257 Par 1.1 above.
258 Viljoen Water as Public Property 183.
259 Agri South Africa v Minister for Minerals and Energy 2013 (4) SA 1 (CC) 81; Agri South Africa v Minister for Minerals and Energy (458/2011) 2012 ZASCA 93; 2012 (5) SA 1 (SCA); 2012 3 All SA 266 (SCA); 2012 (9) BCLR 958 (SCA) (31 May 2012) 49.
260 In the Agri SA-case judgement was handed down by the Constitutional Court dismissing an appeal against a decision of the Supreme Court of Appeal. The background of the case was that Agri South Africa brought an application against the Minister of Minerals and Energy in the North Gauteng High Court claiming that the commencement of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Act 28 of 2004 expropriated the coal rights of Sebenza (Pty) Ltd, which rights had been ceded to Agri South Africa. The High Court granted the application. The decision was appealed by the minister and the supreme court of appeal upheld the appeal. Agri South Africa was aggravated by trusteeship, where the use of 'trust language' in the different environmental legislation corresponds with similar terms used in the Trust Act.\textsuperscript{261}

4.1 Brief overview of the historical development of South African water law

A brief historical discussion highlights the development of water law in South Africa to facilitate an understanding of the impact of the incorporation of the notion of public trusteeship.\textsuperscript{262} Early water law divided water into public and private water.\textsuperscript{263} Following the Dutch occupation of the Cape in 1652, principles of Roman-Dutch law were implemented to regulate water use, which resulted in the institution of Roman-Dutch classifications of water.\textsuperscript{264} Water was regarded as the property of the nation as a whole and was categorised as res publicae.\textsuperscript{265} The government of the Cape early on... exercised control over its public water resources as dominus fluminus. After the second British occupation of the Cape in 1806, the dominus fluminus principles gradually faded due to the introduction of English law. The English influence enforced riparian rights to water, which highlighted the strong rights of private ownership to water. Up until the promulgation of the NWA, which was preceded by the Constitution, different pre-constitutional water legislation existed that was based on aforementioned common law principles. Consequently, a human right to water was statutorily confirmed.

\[\text{publicae were those things in public ownership of many persons falling under the main category of things belonging to somebody. They were differentiated from} \text{ res omnius communes because they had already begun to be in ownership.}\]

According to Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 13 this was done through the enforcement of different proclamations. The Placaet of Van Riebeeck of 10 April 1655 was the first proclamation that was enforced with regards to South African water law. In terms of this proclamation some actions such as the washing of people and clothes in the streams of Table valley was prohibited. This proclamation was only applicable to persons in the services of the Nederlandse Oos-Indiese Kompanje. On 2 January 1687, the state expanded its control over water resources with the proclamation of a new placaet that included persons in the service of the Nederlandse Oos-Indiese Kompanje and burgers. The placaet held that no one was allowed to cross the water course between the castle and table mountain with their wagons or animals. Hall The Origin and Development of Water Rights in South Africa 11-12 pointed out that in the second half of the eighteen century a number of resolutions of the Council of Policy could be found from which can clearly be seen how the state’s position as dominus fluminis was exercised not only towards persons in the service of Nederlandse Oos-Indiese Kompanje but also towards free burgers.

The Right of Passage to Water Act 24 of 1876 was the first codification of water law from the Cape Colony. This act had to do with a person’s right of way over a landowners land in order to regulate the use of water in water sources. The Zuid-Afrikaanse Republiek promulgated The Irrigation Act 24 of 1894, which explained the different categories of public and private water and entitlements thereto. The very first water act for South Africa, the Water Act 40 of 1809 saw the light in 1809. In terms of this act entitlements to water were regulated by establishing different water courts for the different regions in South Africa. After Unification in 1910 the water laws for the Cape, Natal Colonies, the Zuid-Afrikaanse Republiek and the Republic of the Orange Free State were codified in the Irrigation and Conservation of Water Act 8 of 1912. According to Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 22 and Thompson Water Law 55, the significance of this act is that it defined ‘public water’. Section 2 defined a public stream as "A natural stream of water, which when it flows, flows in a known and defined channel (whether or not the channel is dry during any period) if the water thereof is..." in the NWA and the distinction between public and private water was abolished.\textsuperscript{270} The codification of the NWA and the changes it brought about are discussed in more detail in Paragraph 4.3.

4.2 The origin and development of the public trust 'idea'

When the notion of public trusteeship is under discussion, note should be taken of the fact that the origins of the concept in South African law is contested.\textsuperscript{271} Pienaar and Van der Schyff\textsuperscript{272} suggest that the NWA introduced the Anglo-American public trust doctrine to South African natural resources law and that this can be regarded as the " axle of the new water law dispensation." However, Viljoen\textsuperscript{273} argues in her recently completed thesis that:

The assumption that the South African concept of public trusteeship was borrowed or transplanted from the Anglo-American public trust doctrine may not entirely be correct.

Viljoen finds the use Anglo-American law regime as a place of origin of legal principles for South African law strange. She bases her opinion on the fact that South African law originates from Roman-Dutch law, which was later on influenced by English law. She further states that it seems unlikely that the exact "virtual copy or replica" of the Anglo-American public trust will be found in the NWA.\textsuperscript{274} Muir\textsuperscript{275} argues that although the Anglo-American public trust is capable of being applied to the common use of the riparian owners for the purposes of irrigation. A stream which fulfils those conditions in part only of its course shall be deemed to be a public stream in regard to that only". According to Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The History, Development and Allocation of Water Rights in South Africa" 265 although 'private water' was not defined in the Act, it can be accepted that all water that was not 'public water', was private. Viljoen \textit{The Public Trust Doctrine} 23 opines that in order to consolidate and amend the water laws in the Republic of South Africa that had to do with the control, conservation and use of water in the country, the \textit{Water Act 54 of 1956} was brought to light.

\textsuperscript{270} Young \textit{Public Trusteeship and Water Management} 46; Pienaar and Van der Schyff 2009 \textit{Forum on Public Policy: A Journal of the Oxford Round Table} 1.

\textsuperscript{271} Viljoen \textit{The Public Trust Doctrine} 34-35; Thompson \textit{Water Law} 279; Van der Schyff \textit{The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act} 106; Van Der Schyff 2008 \textit{TSAR} 757; Noeth \textit{Common Law Perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship} 5.

\textsuperscript{272} Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The History, Development and Allocation of Water Rights in South Africa" 183.

\textsuperscript{273} Viljoen \textit{Water as Public Property} 186.

\textsuperscript{274} Viljoen \textit{Water as Public Property} 187.
foreign to the South African law regime, the courts may use the "thought" of the Anglo-American public trust to develop it in South African law, as was done with the English private law trust in the Estate Kemp-case.²⁷⁶ Thompson²⁷⁷ in turn opines that the public trust concept is derived from classic Roman law from which South African law descends. He explains that the Romans used the public trust principle in the Roman concepts of res omnium communes and res publicae to determine entitlements of inter alia naturally flowing water. Certain factors contributed to how the principle was applied during specific periods, for example the political framework of the apartheid era in South Africa. Viljoen²⁷⁸ agrees that the South African water law and the concept of public trust descends from Roman law, but disputes Thompson’s statement that the public trust mechanism is not new to South African water law. Thompson’s view is also contradicted by Van der Schyff²⁷⁹, whose opinion is that the public trust concept has been unknown and foreign to South African law until very recently.²⁸⁰ Van der Schyff’s view is that the public trust concept was introduced into South African water law through the NWA as prescribed by the White Paper.²⁸¹ She²⁸² deems it necessary to consult foreign resources to understand what public trusteeship in the NWA entails.²⁸³ According to Van Der Schyff and Viljoen,²⁸⁴ the introduction of the public trust doctrine into South African water law must not be seen as the resurrection of certain Roman, Roman-Dutch, indigenous and customary law

²⁷⁵ Muir 2016 “Using the South African law of trusts” – a contribution at a colloquium regarding public trusteeship.
²⁷⁶ Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD.
²⁷⁷ Thompson Water Law 279.
²⁷⁸ Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 35.
²⁷⁹ Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 379.
²⁸⁰ Van der Schyff The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 106; Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 35.
²⁸² Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Also see Van Der Schyff and Viljoen 2008 The Journal for Trans Disciplinary Research in Southern Africa 344.
²⁸³ Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Also see Van Der Schyff and Viljoen 2008 The Journal for Trans Disciplinary Research in Southern Africa 344; Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 36-37: In the United States of America the public trust doctrine is well known as it forms part of their common law. According to Viljoen Water and the public trust doctrine 38, “valuable lessons can be taken from this foreign legal system in our aim to develop the public trust concept in South African water law.” principles that relate to the categories of res publicae or res omnium communes.\(^\text{285}\) This results in Van Der Schyff and Viljoen's\(^\text{286}\) attempt to encapsulate the notion of the public trust doctrine as the legislative introduction of a foreign legal doctrine that displays similarities with, but goes beyond customary and common law principles.

This dissertation is concerned with the country's water resources and in particular the appointment of national government as the trustee of said water resources. Consequently, focus is drawn to the incorporation of the public trust as it emanated in the NWA. It is uncertain whether the public trust concept that is found in the NWA has its origin in the Roman or Roman-Dutch common law or whether it is a foreign concept that has been introduced into South African law through legislation. It is important for this work to note that different theories speak to the roots of the statutorily introduced notion of public trusteeship. This emphasises the need for such a study, because the nature and content of the public trust and public trusteeship as it emerges from the different natural and environmental resources statues, should be clarified. If it was clear that the notion was taken over from a specific foreign legal jurisdiction, one could merely use the principles as they developed in that jurisdiction to flesh out the nature and content of the doctrine and gauge its impact on inter alia the South African property rights regime. However, the debate around the origin of the notion highlights the importance of comparing it with other legal figures, among others the inter vivos trust, which contains seemingly similar characteristics.

---

\(^{285}\) Property that did not belong to any individual in particular but to the public at large was either classified as res publicae or res omnium communes. Van Der Schyff and Viljoen 2008 The Journal for Trans Disciplinary Research in Southern Africa 342.- "The emergence of the doctrine is not the result of different principles of our Roman, Roman-Dutch, Indigenous and Customary heritage being stitched together to create a new South-African quilt- it is the legislative introduction of a foreign legal doctrine that displays similarities with, but goes beyond customary and common law principles," Van der Schyff The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 105.

4.3 A doctrine of public trust statutorily rooted in the NWA

The term ‘public trust’ in the South African water law has its genesis in the White Paper on a National Water Policy for South Africa, 1997. The NWA followed the White Paper, which was drafted to align South Africa’s water dispensation with the values of the Constitution. Section 24 in particular states:

Everyone has the right

(a) to an environment that is not harmful to their health or wellbeing; and

(b) to have the environment protected, for the benefit of present and future generations, through reasonable legislative and other measures that-

(i) prevent pollution and ecological degradation;

(ii) promote conservation; and

(iii) secure ecologically sustainable development and use of natural resources while promoting justifiable economic and social development.

The White Paper can be regarded as the conduit that honours the Constitutional mandate that "water law shall be subject to and consistent with the Constitution......with regards to water." Van der Schyff states that the 287 Hereinafter referred to as “The White Paper”; Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 379 states that for a public trust doctrine to be acknowledged in a country it needs be either endorsed by the common law or be incorporated by statute.

---

288 HTF Developers (Pty) Ltd v Minister of Environmental Affairs and Tourism & others 2006 ZAGPHC 132 para 19 – in this case it was stated that the imperative flowing from Section 24 of the Constitution “confers upon the authorities a stewardship whereby the present generation is constituted as the custodian or trustee of the environment for future generations.” Also see Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 UCDLR 745, 788- "The public trust doctrine is deeply ingrained in South Africa's Constitution as well as its statutes." Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 28; Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The Public Management of Water Resources in South Africa” 183; Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 UCDLR 750.

289 Section 24 of the Constitution; Currie and De Waal The Bill of Rights Handbook 521.

290 Stein 2002 Natural resources law: School of law- University of Colorado 6.

291 Van der Schyff "South African Natural Resources" 330; Viljoen Water as Public Property; The NWA was the first legislation (apart from the Constitution) which incorporated the concept of public trusteeship into the South African natural resources- and environmental legislation; Also See Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 371 -Other manifestations of the notion of public trust and public trusteeship can be found in different pieces of South African environmental- and natural resources legislation. Section 3(1) of the NWA and Section 3 of the National Environmental Management: Biodiversity Act 10 of 2004 refer to the notion of public trusteeship and Section 12 of the National Environmental Management: Integrated Coastal Management Act 24 of... notion of public trust in the South African water law, is "a domestic product of statutory origin, resultant from South Africa's own legal development."

The NWA is part of a series of environmental acts concerned with the demands of the Constitution to change the country's natural resources dispensation. The long title of the NWA states that the reason for the Act is:

To provide for fundamental reform of the law relating to water resources; to repeal certain laws; and to provide for matters connected therewith.

Section 2 of NWA states the purpose of the Act or as Kidd refers to it, the themes of the Act. From these we learn that the NWA is aimed at facilitating the protection, use, development, conservation, management and control of the nation's water resources. In order to reach this objective, national government must act as custodian of the water resources, ensuring that it is protected, used, developed, conserved, managed, and controlled in an effective manner. This must be facilitated by national government through meeting the basic human needs for the benefit of present and future generations, promoting equitable access to water resources for everyone. National government has to redress the results of past racial and gender discrimination, promoting efficient, sustainable and beneficial use of 2008 refers to the notion of public trust and custodianship. Section 2(4)(o) of the National Environmental Management Act 107 of 1998 states clearly that "the environment is held in public trust for the people." The state is appointed as custodian of the mineral and petroleum resources of the country in terms of Section 3 of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 28 of 2002.

Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The Reform of Water Rights in South Africa" 181; Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 UCDLR 745, 788 - "The public trust doctrine is deeply ingrained in South Africa's Constitution as well as its statutes. The 1996 Constitution laid the foundation for several statutes enacted between 1998 and 2008 that reflect trust doctrine principles;" Stein 2002 Natural resources law: School of law- University of Colorado 3.

Kidd Environmental Law 74.

It may also be referred to as the duties that are bestowed upon government as the public trustee of the country's water resources.

S 2 of the NWA.

Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The Reform of Water Rights in South Africa." 183; Pienaar and Van der Schyff 2009 Forum on Public Policy: A Journal of the Oxford Round Table 1; Kidd Environmental Law 74; Section 2(a) of the NWA.

S 2(b) of the NWA.

S 2(c) of the NWA.
water in the interest of the public. It must further facilitate social and economic development and provide for the growing demand for water use, but also ensure and protect the healthy operation of the hydrological cycle. This must be done by reducing and preventing pollution and degradation of the country's water resources. The rights of neighbouring countries and the international dimensions of South African water resources must be recognised by national government. Dam safety must be promoted and droughts and floods must be managed.

The notion of public trusteeship is statutorily codified in the NWA where Section 3 states:

(1) As the public trustee of the nation’s water resources the National Government, acting through the Minister must ensure that water is protected, used, developed, conserved, managed and controlled in a sustainable and equitable manner, for the benefit of all persons and in accordance with its constitutional mandate.

(2) Without limiting subsection (1), the Minister is ultimately responsible to ensure that water is allocated equitably and used beneficially in the public interest, while promoting environmental values.

(3) The National Government, acting through the minister, has the power to regulate the use, flow and control of all water in the Republic.

Section 3 of the NWA introduces the notion of public trusteeship and defines government's role as public trustee of South Africa's natural water resources. Young points out the irony that through the provisions in the 299 S 2(d) of the NWA.

---

300 S 2(e) of the NWA.
301 S 2(f) of the NWA.
302 S 2(g) of the NWA.
303 S 2(h) of the NWA.
304 S 2(i) of the NWA.
305 S 2(j) of the NWA.
306 S 2(k) of the NWA.
307 S 3(1)–(3) of the NWA; Also see Young Public Trusteeship and Water Management 11; in addition the Water Services Act 108 of 1997 provides for government's role as custodian of the water resources of South Africa.
308 Young Public Trusteeship and Water Management 45; In the preamble of the Water Services Act 108 of 1999, government's role as custodian of the country's water resources are confirmed; Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 UCDLR 747.
NWA, "the state is again the 'dominus fluminis' of water resources, to the extent that it is legally entitled and required to manage and administer water rights." As a result of the incorporation of public trusteeship, the NWA also replaces the pre-existing water use system where exclusive rights could be obtained in water resources by a system of water allowances that is prescribed in the NWA.\textsuperscript{310}

Sections 4 and 5 together with Schedule 1 of the NWA provide a framework of entitlements to water use. It \textit{inter alia} states that "any entitlement granted to a person under this Act replaces any right to use water", which may be granted by any other legislation.\textsuperscript{311}

In its following chapters the NWA provides national government as public trustee with an extensive mandate to manage,\textsuperscript{312} protect\textsuperscript{313} and regulate the use\textsuperscript{314} of the country's natural water resources. A more detailed discussion of national government's mandate acting as the public trustee follows in Paragraph 4.5.3.2 of this work.

\textbf{4.4 Defining the public trust in South African water law}

In South Africa, the concept of public trust has become "equated with environmental protection and is frequently entrenched in constitutional and statutory provisions."\textsuperscript{315} In a nutshell, the foundational principle of the public trust is that:

\begin{quote}
State governments must manage and protect certain natural resources for the sole intergenerational benefit of their citizens.\textsuperscript{316}
\end{quote}

\textsuperscript{309} Young \textit{Public Trusteeship and Water Management} 45.
\textsuperscript{310} Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The History, Development and Allocation of Water Rights in South Africa" 181.
\textsuperscript{311} S 4(4) of the NWA.
\textsuperscript{312} Chapter 2 of the NWA.
\textsuperscript{313} Chapter 3 of the NWA.
\textsuperscript{314} Chapter 4 and 5 of the NWA.
\textsuperscript{315} Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 \textit{UCDLR} 745, 749 – "In South Africa, the doctrine is of constitutional dimension and at the centre of the country’s statutes concerning environmental, water resources, minerals, and coastal zone management."
\textsuperscript{316} Van Der Schyff 2013 \textit{SALJ} 372.
Commentators explain that the phrases 'public trusteeship' and 'stewardship' as used in national resources legislation are foreign to South African law. Van der Schyff argues for instance that the "ethical norm of stewardship" has found its way into South African law through the Constitution and has been statutorily entrenched in, amongst others, the NWA. In addition, she explains that the ordinary dictionary meaning of stewardship is "the careful and responsible management of something entrusted to one’s care." According to Van der Schyff, Stewardship displays certain unique characteristics: a duty towards the environment; the duty to conserve resources; the duty to protect and preserve resources; and a duty towards other people, including future generations, in respect of the resource.

The term 'stewardship' in the context of South African water law constitutes the duty to conserve water as a natural resource and to protect and preserve it for the benefit of the nation as a whole, including future generations. Van der Schyff maintains that:

Through stewardship a stake in any natural resource is vested in both the immediate holder of the resource and the wider community. Although the holder, owner or manager of the resource is entrenched with a fiduciary responsibility, all stakeholders that interact with the resources are obliged to respect the fiduciary relationship that exists between the resource and current and future generations.

Van der Schyff argues, and it is accepted for purposes of this work, that the terms 'state custodianship,' 'public trusteeship,' and 'public trust' is akin to each other in the cadre of South African environmental and natural resources

317 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 373.
318 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 373.
320 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 371.
321 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 371.
322 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372.
323 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372.
324 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 370.
law. It is therefore accepted that the “philosophical notion”\textsuperscript{325} of a fiduciary trust does exist in environmental and natural resources legislation. The public trust 'idea' is therefore that we as the "transient caretakers are holding the earth's natural resources for generations yet to come."\textsuperscript{326} Sand\textsuperscript{327} explains that the notion of public trusteeship entails that certain natural resources "regardless of their allocation to public or private users, are defined as part of an inalienable trust."

The following definition for the public trust in South African water law can be derived, namely that it is "an 'idea,' an underlying philosophy"\textsuperscript{328} in the public sphere that has to do with water as a natural resource that is used by a specific group of the country's citizens and which must be protected for future generations and therefore placed under the fiduciary control of national government.\textsuperscript{329} National government is burdened by legislation and common law to ensure that the water is used, managed and protected in accordance with its mandate.\textsuperscript{330}

\textsuperscript{325} Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 370.
\textsuperscript{326} Fuel Retailers Association of South Africa v Director-General: Environmental Management, Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Environment, Mpumalanga Province & others 2007 (6) SA 4 (CC) 102; Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372.
\textsuperscript{327} Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics 48.
\textsuperscript{328} Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics 48.
\textsuperscript{329} Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics 48.
\textsuperscript{330} S 24 of the Constitution; Section 3(1) of the NWA.
4.5 Contextualising the public trust

4.5.1 The legal nature of the public trust

With the promulgation of the NWA and the incorporation of a doctrine of public trust, water as a natural resource was removed from the sphere of private property and placed in the sphere of public law. Kerr agrees that the concept of public trust falls under public law and not private law. However, the intertwining of public and private law "created a sphere where public and private interests are simultaneously protected." It may seem nonsensical at first to compare a notion that is grounded in private law with one that is assumingly rooted in public law. However, Muir points out that the court's methodical approach in the Estate Kemp-case can be put to work to interpret the public trust against the principles of the private trust. Out of an American perspective, Huffman argues that "it is reality that makes the constant pursuit of the rule of law so important." Huffman is of the opinion that in their pursuit to understand the public trust doctrine, courts may transplant the public trust doctrine from its place in public law to that of trust law or any other law into which it may deem fit. Muir argues that a 'trust theme' has been confirmed in the Constitution and "all natural resources are subject to trust obligations."

331 Van Der Schyff and Viljoen 2008 The Journal for Trans Disciplinary Research in Southern Africa 341
332 Kerr The Customary Law of Immovable Property 68 - Whilst analyzing the case of Molotlegi v President of Bophuthatswana 1989 (3) SA 119 (B), AJ Kerr, is of the opinion that the South African Development Trust could not be a trust in the strict sense, due to the fact that its powers was an aspect of government and not property law. Kerr rested his opinion on the case of Tito v Waddell 1977 Ch 106 a leading English case where the Crown’s responsibilities as trustee were investigated. The court found that the word "trust" in various documents pertaining to the Crown’s duties and responsibilities did not constitute a trust that was judicially enforceable.
334 Muir 2016 "Using the South African Law of Trusts."
335 Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD.
336 Huffman 1988 Envtl L 532
337 Muir 2016 "Using the South African Law of Trusts."
338 Noeth Common Law Perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship 12; Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 UCDLR 789- "the Constitution goes beyond most in its incorporation of trust language. S 24 of the Bill of Rights states that: ...the environment must be protected for the benefit of present and future generations... S 27 states that ... the
4.5.2 Creation of the public trust

According to Van der Schyff\textsuperscript{339}, the essential elements that are necessary to "breathe life into" and which forms the components of the notion of public trust are:

(i) a natural resource
(ii) used by a specific community of citizens
(iii) destined to be protected for intergenerational access
(iv) which is placed under the custodial or fiduciary control of a state authority.
(v) This state authority is then burdened with the responsibility to ensure that the resource is used, managed and protected in accordance with the public interest to guarantee intergenerational access and use.\textsuperscript{340}

4.5.3 Parties to the public trust

The establishment of a 'trust theme' and the use of 'trust language' prompt an investigation into the parties of the public trust to eventually establish if the parties of the two notions share any similarities. In American law, Caspersen\textsuperscript{341} compares the public trust with private law trusts. She states that as in private law trusts, the public trust also has four elements, namely the 'res' or trust property, the trustee, the beneficiary and the founder. Van der Schyff\textsuperscript{342}, however, holds a different opinion and says that it is clear that the public trust only has two parties. In Paragraph 5, Caspersen's view is analysed and compared with the elements provided for in the NWA to determine whether it is possible to compare the public trust with private law trusts.

\textsuperscript{339} Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 374.
\textsuperscript{340} Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics 48.
\textsuperscript{341} Caspersen 1996 BC Envlt Aff LR 361.
\textsuperscript{342} Van der Schyff The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 106; Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 40; Huffman 1988 Envlt L 535, 538.
4.5.3.1 The founder of the public trust

The discussion above comfortably accepts and states that a fiduciary public trust does exist in South African water law. This prompts the question: If there is a public trust in water law, who is its founder? To date, very little has been written on the identity and existence of the founder of the public trust in the South African context. However, the brave few who dared to comment are of the opinion that the public trust has a dual nature and does not have a founder as the concept is used in trust law.\(^{343}\) In an attempt to clarify the question of who the founder of the public trust is, foreign resources were consulted. Sand's\(^{344}\) presumption is that it is the community or the nation. Caspersen\(^{345}\) contends that the founder of the public trust can be identified as the creator or maker of the trust property, depending on one's 'theological inclinations'. To support her point of view, she refers to the biblical account where God created Eden for the common possession of Adam and Eve,\(^{346}\) when God had "put him (Adam) in the Garden of Eden to work it and take care of it."\(^{347}\) Huffman\(^{348}\), however, argues that the identity of the creator cannot be answered. Van der Schyff\(^{349}\) supports this view. To substantiate this view of Van der Schyff and Huffman, Viljoen\(^{350}\) asked the question whether the creator of a trust can be the legislative branch of Government because it introduced the doctrine through legislation? Viljoen also poses the question whether government can then be the creator and the sole trustee?\(^{351}\) Both questions remain unanswered. Huffman\(^{352}\) argues that three parties are needed to create a trust in American law, the creator of the trust, the trustee and the beneficiary. He points out that the public can be identified as the beneficiary and the state as the trustee, but in his view, a single entity cannot \(^{343}\) Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 40; Van der Schyff The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 106.

\(^{344}\) Turnipseed Environment Magazine 8.

\(^{345}\) Caspersen 1996 BC Env tl Aff LR 361.

\(^{346}\) Caspersen 1996 BC Env tl Aff LR 361

\(^{347}\) Genesis 2 verse 15 of the Holy Bible.

\(^{348}\) Huffman 1988 Env tl L 535, 538.

\(^{349}\) Par 4.5.3 above

\(^{350}\) Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 40

\(^{351}\) Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine 40

\(^{352}\) Huffman 1988 Env tl L 535, 538
be the trustee and beneficiary of a trust. He argues that the democratic state as the agent of the people cannot act as fiduciary, through the state, for themselves. In the South African water law context where the public trust is a statutory creation, it may be argued that the legislature can be seen as the creator of the trust.

4.5.3.2 The public trustee and its fiduciary duties

National government is statutorily appointed as the public trustee of the nation's water resources.\textsuperscript{353} An interesting aspect that Van der Schyff\textsuperscript{354} points out is the difference between the NWA and other environmental legislation in this regard. She alludes to the fact that the custodial authority in the NWA is 'national government,' while the custodial authority in the other environmental and natural resources legislation is the 'state'. She surmises that it can be argued that water as a resource was so important to the legislature that it was deemed fit to bind national government as a whole with a fiduciary duty towards the country's water resources. The 'trust language' that is used in the NWA "affirm[s] and link[s] the intergenerational importance" of water as a natural resource to national government's fiduciary responsibility to protect and manage it.\textsuperscript{355}

As stated in Paragraph 4.3 above, the NWA provides the public trustee with an extensive mandate to manage, protect and regulate the use of the country's natural water resources. Section 3(2) states the responsibilities of the public trustee, namely to ensure that water is allocated equitably and used beneficially in the public interest, while promoting environmental values. Section 3(3) bestows the power upon the public trustee to regulate the use, flow and control of all water in the country.\textsuperscript{356} This mandate simultaneously

\textsuperscript{353} S 3(1) of the NWA.
\textsuperscript{354} Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ381.
\textsuperscript{355} Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 379-380.
\textsuperscript{356} Section 3(1)–(3) of the NWA; Also see Young Public Trusteeship and Water Management 11 and 116 ; in addition the Water Services Act 108 of 1997 provides for government's role as custodian of the water resources of South Africa; Van der Schyff and Viljoen 2008 The Journal for Transdisciplinary Research in Southern Africa 345.
creates the overarching responsibility that the trustee must fulfil regarding the nation's water resources. It circumscribes and delineates the different components of national government's fiduciary responsibility in the different chapters of the NWA. Chapter 2 deals with the development of strategies to facilitate the proper management of water resources. Chapter 3 provides that the public trustee must put measures in place for the protection of water as a natural resource. Chapters 4 and 5 are concerned with the regulation of the use of water as a natural resource. Chapter 4 deals with the various forms of water use in extensive detail. In addition, Chapter 5 deals with the financial aspects of the management of the use of water. The 357 Chapter 2 s 5-11 of the NWA.

358 Chapter 2 of the NWA is divided into two parts. Part 1 of Chapter 2 requires the public trustee to consult with the nation as a whole, by inviting written comments on the proposed strategy in order to put in place the "progressive development" of a national water resource strategy. This strategy must provide the framework for the "protection, use, development, conservation, management and control of water resources for the country as a whole." The strategy must also include the framework "within which water will be managed at regional or catchment level, in defined water management areas. The national water resource strategy must be formally reviewed from time to time and is binding on all authorities and institutions exercising powers or performing duties under the NWA, which states in Section 7 that they must give effect to the strategy. Part 2 of requires that the public trustee must see that every catchment agency progressively develop a catchment management strategy for the water resources within its water management area. These strategies must be in harmony with the national water resource strategy that was developed in Part 1. In the development of the catchment management strategy, "a catchment management agency must seek co-operation and agreement on water-related matters from the various stakeholders and interested persons. The strategy must be reviewed from time to time and must include a water allocation plan. Principles for allocating water to existing and prospective users must be set. These principles must take into account "all matters relevant to the protection, use, development, conservation, management and control of water resources. S 11 states that the public trustee must give effect to this strategy.

359 Chapter 3 s 12-20 of the NWA.
360 Chapter 3 is also divided in two parts. Part 1 (Section 12) of the protection plan is that the public trustee must develop a water classification system. Part 2 of the plan (Section 13-15 of the NWA) is that the public trustee must use the established classification system to determine the class and resource quality objectives of all or part of the water resources considered significant. The purpose is to establish clear goals relating to the quality of the relevant water resource. Part 3 (Section 16-18) deals with basic human needs reserve as well as ecological reserve. The public trustee has the duty imposed upon it to determine the reserve. Part 4 (Section 19) and Part 5 (Section 20) deals with pollution prevention. This section determines that the public trustee's delegate namely the catchment management agency may enforce the necessary measures to remedy a situation concerning the pollution of water.

361 Chapter 4 and 5 s 21-62 of the NWA.
362 The preamble of Chapter 4 of the NWA states: "As this Act is founded on the principle that National Government has overall responsibility for and authority over water resource management, including the equitable allocation and beneficial use of water in the public interest, a person can only be entitled to use water if the use is permissible under the Act. This Chapter is therefore of central significance to the Act, as it lays the public trust doctrine as embodied in the NWA therefore "provides government with both the authority and the duty to act as trustee to conserve these resources for the benefit of current and future generations."\textsuperscript{363}

In Chapters 2 to 5 of the NWA, the public trustee's duties, rights and obligations are statutorily codified. In order to put the public trustee in a position to fulfil its mandate, Chapter 6 to 14 of the NWA "sets out various powers and duties of the public trustee." These chapters stipulate the general powers and duties of the trustee\textsuperscript{364}. Specific obligations and mandates relate \textit{inter alia} to the powers to establish catchment management agencies\textsuperscript{365} and to establish and disestablish water user associations\textsuperscript{366} and advisory committees.\textsuperscript{367} Bodies to implement international agreements concerning the management and development of water resources that South Africa shares with neighbouring countries are also statutorily determined.\textsuperscript{368} In addition, the specific obligation to "establish and operate government waterworks in the interest of the public"\textsuperscript{369} and the duty to ensure that the safety of new and existing dams are improved\textsuperscript{370}, are also statutorily provided for in the Act.

The NWA set out the extent of the trustee's fiduciary responsibilities. The fiduciary duty of national government as the public trustee is rooted in Section 24 of the Constitution. Due to the fiduciary character of the public trust created in the NWA, it can be argued that the general fiduciary duties that are applicable to private law trusts and that are rooted in the common law also

\begin{itemize}
    \item[basis for regulating water use. The various types of licensed and unlicensed entitlements to use water are dealt with in detail.] Even though the provisions in Chapters 4 and 5 are of cardinal importance in this study, unpacking the provisions contained therein is a subject matter for another study. For this study, it suffices to know that the public trustee has the duty and obligation to manage water use in South Africa in a beneficial manner for the current and future generations.
    \item[363] Turnipseed \textit{Environment Magazine} 8.
    \item[364] Chapter 6 s 63-76 of the NWA - set out general powers and duties of the public trustee, such as the powers of delegation and expropriation and the power of intervention in litigation.
    \item[365] Chapter 7 s 77-90 of the NWA.
    \item[366] Chapter 8 s 91-98 of the NWA.
    \item[367] Chapter 9 s 99-101 of the NWA.
    \item[368] Chapter 10 s 102-108 of the NWA.
    \item[369] Chapter 11 s 109-116 of the NWA.
    \item[370] Chapter 12 s 117-123 of the NWA.
\end{itemize}
apply in the case of the public trust. The public trustee's fiduciary responsibility in the environment and natural resources law was further confirmed in the case of BP Southern Africa (Pty) Ltd v MEC for Agriculture, Conservation, Environment and Land Affairs. In this case the court confirmed that they too must ensure that the responsibilities of trusteeship are properly carried out. The court identified an "interrelationship between the well-being of society and the preservation of the environment" and pointed out that "the future well-being of society is intimately linked to the availability of environmental resources." The court further found that state trusteeship is the axle that furthers this aim. The court found the duty of trusteeship independently from legislation and found it a by-product of the recognition of the Bill of Rights. This confirms trusteeship as a constitutional obligation.

4.5.3.3 The beneficiaries of the public trust

The preamble of the NWA states that water is a natural resource that belongs to all people. In addition, Section 2(a) of the NWA identifies present and future generations as beneficiaries. The short answer to the question as to who the beneficiaries of the public trust created in the NWA are, would therefore be 'all people'. That the broad category of beneficiaries extends beyond citizens of the country is emphasised by the fact that the trustee also has the responsibility to conclude international agreements concerning the management and development of water resources that South Africa shares with neighbouring countries. Section 24 of the Constitution declares that the environment must be protected for the benefit of current and future generations. Van der Schyff states that:

---

371 Paragraph 3.4.2.2.1 above; Muir 2016 "Using the South African Law of Trusts."
372 BP Southern Africa (Pty) Ltd v MEC for Agriculture, Conservation, Environment and Land Affairs 2004 (5) SA 124 (W) 150.
373 Young Public Trusteeship and Water Management 62.
374 Young Public Trusteeship and Water Management 62 – "...Arguably, therefore, trusteeship is a constitutional doctrine, even if only in the context of environmental protection of water resources."
375 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 373.
Every citizen, as a 'beneficiary' of the trust, may hold the trustees accountable and obtain judicial protection against encroachments or the deterioration of the national resource.

If national government neglects its duty towards the beneficiary or water as natural resource, appropriate relief may be sought against national government as trustee through the provisions of Section 38 of the Constitution and the provisions in the NWA.

4.6 Summary

The notion of public trusteeship in South African water law sprouted from the Constitution and was ultimately effected in the NWA, which introduced a new water law regime. The contentious idea of public trusteeship is that national government shall be appointed as the public trustee of all the nation’s natural water resources and shall exercise its powers as trustee within a public trust. There is no consensus amongst authors on the origin of the public trust concept.

A doctrine of public trust was statutorily codified in the NWA. The purpose or themes of the NWA are set out in Section 2 of the Act. National government is mandated by Section 3 of the NWA and common law to ensure that the water is protected, used, developed, conserved, managed and controlled in a beneficial way for current and future generations.

Through the Constitution, the "ethical norm of stewardship" was incorporated into South African water law. A fiduciary trust exists in the NWA. A definition for the public trust in South African water is that it is "an 'idea,' an underlying philosophy" in the public sphere that has to do with water as a natural resource that is used by a specific group of the country’s citizens and which must be protected for future generations and therefore placed under the fiduciary control of national government.

376 Par 4-4.2 above.
377 Par 4.3 above.
378 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 373.
379 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics 48.
380 Par 4.4 above.
The discussion attempted to put the notion of public trust in context. The NWA changed the legal nature of water to the public sphere. For the public trust in water law to come into existence, it has to be concerned with a natural resource that is used by a specific community of citizens. The natural resource must be destined for protection for intergenerational access and must be placed under the custodial or fiduciary control of a state authority.\textsuperscript{381}

The discussion investigated parties of the public trust and established that there is no consensus amongst authors whether the public trust has a tripartite or a dual nature. The existence of a public trustee and its fiduciary duty is confirmed in Section 3 of the NWA. The different chapters of the NWA set out the different components of national government's fiduciary duties. The preamble and Section 2(a) of the NWA acknowledges that the public trust has beneficiaries, namely the present and future generations of the South African nation as a whole.\textsuperscript{382}

With above clear summary to use as reference, the discussion now endeavours to identify incidences of similarity and differences between the inter vivos private law trust and the notion of public trust in the NWA.

5 Incidences of similarity and differences

5.1 Introduction

The identified fiduciary responsibility attributed to trustees makes an analogy between the public trust and an inter vivos trust possible.\textsuperscript{383} The fiduciary responsibility of trustees or functionaries of a trust constitutes the axle around which the idea of a trust in the general sense operates in the South African

\footnotesize

\textsuperscript{381} Par 4.5.1 and 4.5.2 above.
\textsuperscript{382} Par 4.5.3.1, 4.5.3.2 and 4.5.3.3 above.
\textsuperscript{383} Noeth "Common Law perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship" 12; Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 UCDLR 789- "the Constitution goes beyond most in its incorporation of trust language."
In American law Stevens proposes that the similarities between the public trust and the inter vivos trust link the concept of public trusteeship to trust law. In a South African context, certain similarities indeed pose a correlation between the two notions. This view is developed further in this work.

The framework within which the private law trust in Paragraph 2 of this work and the inter vivos trust in Paragraph 3 of this work were investigated is now used to measure the notion of public trust against the inter vivos trust.

5.2 The two notions in context

Paragraph 2 of this work establishes that a private law trust is a legal institution that facilitates a unique relationship of legal ownership and use of property. As pointed out, the defining characteristic of the private law trust is that the trustee as legal owner does not benefit from the use of the trust property, but is obliged to deal with trust property in a fiduciary and beneficial manner in the interest of the beneficiaries.

In the instance of the public trust, the trustee has an administrative title over the natural resource and the beneficiaries have an administrative expectation that national government will fulfil its fiduciary duties and obligations as set out in the various sections of the NWA.

5.2.1 Development of the trust idea

The private law trust 'idea' was borrowed from English law and developed in the South African law regime through common law principles, case law and

---

384 Par 2.4.4 above, where figure 1 illustrates the overarching umbrella effect of the fiduciary characteristic of a trust in the general sense in South African trust law.
385 Stevens 1980 UC Davis LR 228
386 Another USA author namely Huffman 1988 Envtl L 533-534, 561 states the contrary he argues that the use of the word 'trust' in the name of the doctrine is misleading and that only in the original English law formulation could the notion possibly be described as a trust.
387 Par 2.1 above.
later on the Trust Act.\(^{388}\) The origin and point of departure of development of the public trust is a contested subject among authors. Interestingly enough, the Anglo-American public trust doctrine also originated from English law.\(^{389}\) However a fiduciary trust has been established in the NWA, which was piloted by the Constitution.\(^{390}\)

5.2.2 The trust in different contexts

As seen above, the trust institution in South African law can be identified by the firm fiduciary duty that rests on the functionaries of the notion of trust. This 'general notion of trust' in the South African law can be divided into two main contexts, namely the trust in the narrow sense and the trust in the wide sense. Both these contexts are overarched by the fiduciary duty of the trustees.\(^{391}\) The trust in the narrow sense is the trust as it is defined in Section 1(a) of the Trust Act. The inter vivos trust is part of the trust in the narrow sense because it is governed by the Trust Act. The trust in the wide sense is the notion that embodies any legal arrangement between a functionary and another person with regard to control and administration of an impersonal object. The Trust Act does not apply to the trust in the wide sense. Consequently, the public trust falls under the trust in the wide sense because it embodies a legal arrangement between the public trustee and the nation as a whole with regard to the control and administration of water. One main difference between the concepts that stands out is that the public trust falls under public law and the inter vivos trust under private law.

5.2.3 Definitions

In order to answer the research question, which concerns identifying similarities between the inter vivos trust and the notion of public trust, it is necessary to define them. Paragraph 3 reaches a definition for the inter vivos trust as 'the legal relationship in the private law that comes into existence in the lifetime of the founder thereof, when assets have been placed under the control of a trustee by the founder for the benefit of a beneficiary or for a specific purpose'.

Paragraph 4.4 above defines the public trust in South African water law as "an 'idea,' an underlying philosophy"\(^{392}\) in the sphere of public law that has to do with water as a natural resource that is used by a specific group of the country's citizens which must be protected for future generations and therefore placed under the fiduciary control of national government.\(^{393}\) National government is burdened with legislation and common law to ensure that the water is used, managed and protected in accordance with its mandate.\(^{394}\) Both of these definitions emphasise the trustee's fiduciary responsibility to deal with assets placed under his control. A strong fiduciary resemblance is detected.

5.2.4 Legal nature

The term 'legal nature' of a specific notion can be interpreted in various ways. In this work the legal nature of the inter vivos trust was confirmed as being akin to a stipilatio alterii.\(^{395}\) This is mainly because the tri-partite nature and the place of the inter vivos private law trust in the South African law are not questioned. On the other hand, the determination of the legal nature of the public trust is firstly concerned with the question of where the public trust fits in. The conclusion is that the public trust falls under the public law.\(^{396}\) There is no consensus among authors on whether the public trust has a tri-partite or a dual nature.\(^{397}\) The debate concerning the tri-partite or dual nature of the public trust is discussed in more detail in Paragraph 5.3.1.

---

392 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics 48.
393 Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics 48.
394 Section 24 of the Constitution; Section 3(1) of the NWA.
395 Par 3.3 above.
396 Par 4.5.1 above.
397 Par 4.5.3 and 4.5.3.1 above.
5.2.5 Creation

For the inter vivos trust to come into existence, the essential elements are that the founder must have the intention to create a trust and that the object of the trust must be stated clearly and must be lawful. The trust property must furthermore be defined with certainty and “made over” to trustees. The beneficiaries of the trust must be ascertained or ascertainable, or the impersonal object must be clearly defined.

For a public trust to come into existence, the trust property has to be a natural resource whereas there is no prescription of what the trust property must be for the inter vivos trust to come into existence other than that is has to be lawful. It can therefore be accepted that the public trust is utilised for the protection and management of natural resources and the inter vivos trust for any object as long as it is defined with certainty and lawful. The trust property must further be utilised by a specific group of people (the public trust beneficiaries, who was established to be the people of South Africa), whereas the property of the inter vivos trust can be utilised by the trust beneficiaries according to their rights as set out in the trust deed. The trust objective must be to protect the trust property for future generations and that government must act as trustee of the public trust in a fiduciary manner. In the instance of the inter vivos trust, the trust object must clearly be defined.

The introduction of the public trust doctrine into the South African water law effectively separates the dominium in water resources from the use and enjoyment of the water resources. Through the public trust doctrine, the South African government acquires an administrative title to water as public property and the people as a “generic entity” acquires the use and enjoyment of the water resources. The separation of ownership and control from the enjoyment of the trust benefits brought the notion of public trust in line with the "core idea" of a private law trust.\textsuperscript{399}

398 Par 3.4.2 above.

5.3 The parties to the different notions of trust

In both incidences of trust, the trustee holds, controls and administers the property.\textsuperscript{400} The trustee furthermore acts not for his own benefit, but for the benefit of others.\textsuperscript{401} As established earlier in this work, the private law \textit{inter vivos} trust has a tripartite nature that consists of a founder who carries over his or her assets (the trust property) to another party (the trustee) who is given the duty to manage and protect the assets on behalf of a third party (the beneficiary).\textsuperscript{402} If Caspersen’s\textsuperscript{403} ideas are followed and put to the test in South African law, the public trust as it emanates in the NWA will consist of the national government acting through the minister, as the trustee, the nation as the beneficiaries,\textsuperscript{404} the country’s water resources as the trust property or \textit{res}\textsuperscript{405} and the settlor(founder), who shall be identified as the maker or creator of the \textit{res} according to one’s theological beliefs. However, as discussed earlier, this view is contested and it is subsequently discussed in more detail in the following paragraph.\textsuperscript{406}

5.3.1 The identity of the founder of the two notions

Any natural or legal person(s) who has the competency to enter into a contractual agreement can be the party who establishes an \textit{inter vivos} trust by handing over the property or control thereof to the trustee(s) in the case of an ownership trust or the trust beneficiaries with the trustee holding control

\begin{itemize}
\item \textsuperscript{399} Land and Agricultural Bank of SA v Parker 2004 4 All SA 261 (SCA) 267 a-b, g; Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD 503-504.
\item \textsuperscript{400} Noeth Common Law Perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship 12; Du Toit South African Trust Law 6.
\item \textsuperscript{401} Noeth Noeth Common Law Perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship 12; Du Toit South African Trust Law 6.
\item \textsuperscript{402} Par 3.4.2 above.
\item \textsuperscript{403} Par 4.5.3 above.
\item \textsuperscript{404} Caspersen 1996 BC Envil Aff LR 361.
\item \textsuperscript{405} Caspersen 1996 BC Envil Aff LR 361.
\item \textsuperscript{406} Par 4.5.3 above
\end{itemize}
over the property, in the case of the bewind trust, with the intent to form a trust for the benefit of a third party.\textsuperscript{407} Paragraph 4.5.3.1 pointed out that there is no consensus among authors on whether the public trust has a tri-partite or a dual nature. A convincing argument is that the public trust only has a dual nature because national government acts as the agent and therefore "the people cannot act as fiduciary, through the state, for themselves." However, it is not the identity of the trustee or the beneficiary of the public trust that is in question. In relation to private law trusts, Du Toit\textsuperscript{408} states that a trust will not be per se invalid merely because the founder becomes the sole trustee, provided that it is not also the sole beneficiary. The same is also true in instances where the trustee is also the beneficiary. Therefore, the mere fact that there are only two parties in Du Toit's view of a public trust would not necessarily disqualify the public trust from being regarded as a trust institution.\textsuperscript{409} This work furthermore proposes that the public trust has a tri-partite nature with the creator of water as a natural resource being the founder\textsuperscript{410}, national government acting through the minister as the public trustee and the people as a generic entity as the beneficiaries.

5.3.2 The trustee of the two notions

The powers, duties and obligations of the trustee of the inter vivos trust are set out in the trust deed. The public trustee's mandate derives from the NWA. The NWA can symbolically be seen as the 'trust deed' in terms of which the public trustee's power, duties and obligations derive.

\textsuperscript{407} Par 3.4.2.2 above
\textsuperscript{408} Du Toit South African Trust Law 5.
\textsuperscript{409} Par 4.5.3 and 4.5.3.1 above.
\textsuperscript{410} Out of a christian's point of view, Genesis 1:28 of the Holy Bible states that God said to Adam and Eve to subdue the earth and take charge of the "fish, the birds and all the wild animals." Psalm 24:1 of the Holy Bible states that the earth is the Lord's. Exodus 19:5 of the Holy Bible states that the whole earth is the property of God. Also see Van der Schyff The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 83 – "It is also accepted from a christian perspective that God gave norms in His creation to order the social life of human mankind into societal relations." It is therefore undeniable out of a christian's point of view that God is the founder of the public trust.
This work indicates early on that there is a notion of a trust in the wide sense in South African trust law.\(^{411}\) Trust in the wide sense "as a somewhat generic term" embodies any legal arrangement between a functionary and another person regarding the control and administration of an impersonal object.\(^{412}\) In all instances of the trust in the wide sense, including the public trust, an overarching fiduciary responsibility is present in terms of which the functionary is duty-bound to show utmost good faith to the beneficiary in the wide sense in the administration of the personal object.\(^{413}\) In the instance of the public trust as it emanates in the NWA, government does not own the country's water, but must manage and protect it in a fiduciary manner.\(^{414}\) There are opinions within the scope of the water law that the word "trust" must not be literally interpreted, but rather be seen as a fiduciary responsibility that is ascribed to state.\(^{415}\) Others attest that "the powers government exercise is limited to that for the good of the society and therefore nothing more than a "fiduciary trust.""\(^{416}\) Despite different opinions, the important thing is that an indication exists that a fiduciary responsibility is bestowed on government to manage and protect water as a natural resource in the interest of the nation as a whole.\(^{417}\) This fiduciary responsibility of the public trustee resembles the trust in the wide sense as part of the general trust idea in the South African

---

411 Par 2.4.2 above.
412 Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers (Pty) Ltd 1996 (3) SA 786 (C) 794 D-E; Also see Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 9
413 Du Toit South African Trust law 2; Smith The Authorization of Trustees 42-44; Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study 9
414 Mostert Snr and another v S 2010 s All SA 482 (SCA) 482 22; Van Der Schyff and Viljoen The Journal for Trans Disciplinary Research in Southern Africa 344 -for although the State acquired the legal title of the nation's water resources, the title is to be held as trustee, in a purely fiduciary capacity.
415 Van der Schyff The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 106; Van Van Der Schyff 2013 SALJ 372; Also see Van der Schyff and Viljoen 2008 The Journal for Transdisciplinary Research in Southern Africa 342; Noeth "Common Law Perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship" 12
416 Locke Second Treatise of Civil Government 1690 asserted that the powers government exercise is limited to that for the good of the society and therefore nothing more than a "fiduciary trust" http://www.constitution.org/jl/2ndtreat.htm Chapter XI Section 135 – "Their (government) power, in the utmost bounds of it, is limited to the public good of the society".
417 Van Der Schyff and Viljoen The Journal for Trans Disciplinary Research in Southern Africa 344; Noeth Common Law Perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship 12; Mostert Snr and another v S 2010 s All SA 482 (SCA) 482 22- In the instance of the public trust as it emanated in the NWA, government does not own the country's water but must manage and protect it in a fiduciary manner.
The fiduciary nature of the public trust as it emanates in the NWA stems from the Constitution\textsuperscript{419}, common law principles and in terms of Section 3 of the NWA. It resembles the fiduciary responsibilities of the private law trustee as set out in the \textit{Trust Act} and common law principles.

\textit{5.3.3 The beneficiaries of the two notions}

The beneficiary or beneficiaries of an \textit{inter vivos} trust can be any natural or juristic person, including the trustee of the trust who is nominated as beneficiaries in the trust deed. The \textit{inter vivos} trust can also have different kinds of beneficiaries and beneficiaries with different rights.\textsuperscript{420} The preamble of the NWA gives a clear identification of who the beneficiaries of the public trust in water law are when it states that water is a natural resource that belongs to all people. Section 2(a) of the NWA identifies present and future generations as beneficiaries and the \textit{Constitution} furthermore declares that the environment must be protected for the benefit of current and future generations. It is clear that both the \textit{inter vivos} trust as stipulated in the \textit{Trust Act}, as well as the public trust, has a fiduciary responsibility towards the beneficiaries of the different notions.

\textit{5.4 Pursuing the possibilities}

Paragraph 3 thoroughly discusses the \textit{inter vivos} trust to set the benchmark against which the public trust could be tested to attempt to answer the research question. The public trust and the \textit{inter vivos} trust share mutual characteristics like \textit{inter alia} the similarity of the different parties to both notions.\textsuperscript{421} The main characteristic that both notions share is the fiduciary obligation towards beneficiaries and the trust property.\textsuperscript{422} This fiduciary obligation is described in this work as the overarching characteristic that can

418 Par 2.4.2 above
419 S 24 of the Constitution
420 Par 3.4.2.3 above.
421 Par 5.3 above.
422 Par 5.1 above.
identify the general notion of trust in the South African law.\textsuperscript{423} Therefore, the fiduciary obligation that characterises the public trust automatically elevates it to a trust in the wide sense.\textsuperscript{424} Trusts in general in the South African law have been compared to “extraordinary drugs” that aids equally well family, business, religious and charitable problems.\textsuperscript{425} According to Honore\textsuperscript{426}, the trust is now a vibrant and authentic institution of modern South African law, for which the courts have devised distinctively South African rules and principles, and for which \textit{new uses are constantly being devised.}\textsuperscript{427}

Du Toit\textsuperscript{428} avers that trusts are put in the modern ever changing legal and commercial environment to a multitude of diverse purposes, which testifies to the trusts adaptability and usefulness. Halho\textsuperscript{429} expresses the view that:

\begin{quote}
Even the most elementary propositions cannot be regarded as settled” and concluded that “It will take the work of several generations of judges and text writers before our law of trusts reaches maturity.
\end{quote}

Halho\textsuperscript{430} made this comment half a century ago and it is trite that the development of the South African law of trusts still has not reached maturity.\textsuperscript{431}

\section*{6 Conclusion and recommendations}

This work sought to interrogate whether the public trust as it emanates from the NWA show similarities to the \textit{inter vivos} trust in such a way that it can be regarded as akin to each other. To be specific, the research question that underpinned this study was:

\begin{itemize}
\item \textsuperscript{423} Par 2.4.3 and 4.5.3.2 above.
\item \textsuperscript{424} Par 2.4.2 above.
\item \textsuperscript{425} Le Paulle \textit{Civil Law Substitutes for Trusts} 1147.
\item \textsuperscript{426} Cameron \textit{et al} Honore's \textit{South African Law of Trusts} 2.
\item \textsuperscript{427} Writers own emphasise.
\item \textsuperscript{428} Du Toit \textit{South African Trust law} 1.
\item \textsuperscript{429} Halho 1952 \textit{SALJ} 349-350.
\item \textsuperscript{430} Halho 1952 \textit{SALJ} 349-350.
\item \textsuperscript{431} Kitshoff \textit{Gedagtes oor die Regsaard van 'n Trust} 33.
\end{itemize}
To what extent does the doctrine of public trust as envisaged in the White Paper on a National Water Policy for South Africa and incorporated in the National Water Act 36 of 1998 show similarities with a legal trust as provided for in the Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988?

In an effort to reach an answer of sorts, the private law inter vivos trust was investigated to set the base against which the public trust as created in the NWA could be tested.\(^{432}\) This approach revealed that both notions entailed corresponding characteristics.\(^{433}\)

This work started with an investigation into the South African private trust law, which is mainly governed by the Trust Act, the South African common law and the South African court precedents.\(^{434}\) It was established that a general notion of trust exists in the South African law, which resorts under the sphere of private law in South Africa. This general notion of trust can be divided into two main themes, namely the trust in the narrow sense and the trust in the wide sense.\(^{435}\) Trust in the wide sense refers to any fiduciary relationship between one person and another where that person has legal say over another person’s property.\(^{436}\) Trust in the narrow sense stipulates the same relationship than the trust in the wide sense, except that the trust in the narrow sense is governed by the Trust Act. The inter vivos trust is specifically defined in the Trust Act and is therefore termed a trust in the narrow sense.\(^{437}\)

As the research progressed, it became clear that the public trust was established in the South African water law through the NWA, which was piloted by the Constitution.\(^{438}\) This newly created concept resembles the public trust doctrine as it functions in certain foreign legal jurisdictions.\(^{439}\) To reach the aim of this research, focus was drawn to the reference made in the \(^{432}\) Par 2 and 3 above.

\(^{433}\) Par 4 and 5 above.
\(^{434}\) Par 2.3 above.
\(^{435}\) Par 2.4 above.
\(^{436}\) Par 2.4.2 above.
\(^{437}\) Par 2.4.1 above.
\(^{438}\) Par 4 above.
\(^{439}\) Par 4.2 above.
White Paper in terms of which government was named custodian of the nation’s water resources and was instructed to exercise its powers as a public trustee. This notion was later on promulgated as a public trust in the NWA.

As was pointed out before, this “public trust” language shows similarities with terms used in the South African private trust law. An analogy between a public trust and an inter vivos trust can be drawn through the fiduciary responsibility attributed to trustees.

One firm characteristic that the public trust shares with the inter vivos trust is the overarching fiduciary relationship that both notions of trust possess. It was therefore submitted that the public trust could fit in the notion of trust in the wide sense because it constitutes a fiduciary relationship between government and the nation with regard to the countries natural water resources.

In the case of trust in the wide sense, the trust has to resort under private law. This is not the case with the public trust, which is part of the public law. However the study established that a sphere “where public and private interests are simultaneously protected” was created with the intertwining of private and public law, and this offers a solution. There is the opinion that in their pursuit to understand the public trust doctrine, courts may use existing private trust law to analyse and interpret the public trust doctrine.

The study established that the inter vivos trust is a manifestation of the legal trust as provided for in the Trust Act. The Trust Act does not include or refer to the public trust in any way. The public trust is the product of the NWA. The main difference between the two notions, besides the fact that the first instance falls under the private law sphere and the latter under the public law.
sphere, is that the Trust Act expressly states which trusts are governed by the Trust Act.\(^{447}\)

It can therefore be concluded that even if a way can be found to align the public and private law of South Africa for purposes of fitting the public trust into the cadre of trust law, the public trust as created in the NWA is not akin to the inter vivos trust due to the different legislation that governs the two notions. However, the established common ground between the public trust and the inter vivos trust can function as a lens through which the common law standard of trusteeship can be viewed in a way that establishes the ideal standard of a functionary's fiduciary duty.

\(^{447}\) Par 3.2.2 above.
BIBLIOGRAPHY

Literature

B

Badenhorst et al The Law of Property
Badenhorst PJ et al Silberberg and Schoeman's The Law of Property
5th ed (LexisNexis Durban 2006)

Bennett and Powell 2000 SAJHR
Bennett TW and Powell CH "The state as trustee of land" 2000 SAJHR
601-622

Bergh and Feinbergh 2004 African Historical Review Bergh J and Feinbergh HM "Trusteeship and black land ownership in the Transvaal during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries" 2004
African Historical Review 170-193

(LexisNexis Durban 2013)

Blignaut Curbing the Abuse of Trusts
Blignaut L Curbing the Abuse of Trusts: Is the "Independent Trustee" the Solution? (LLM-dissertation University of Pretoria Pretoria 2015)

Blumm 1989 Environmental Law
Blumm M "Public property and the democratization of western water law: A modern view of the public trust doctrine" 1989 Environmental Law 573-604

Blumm and Guthrie 2011-2012 UCDLR
Blumm MC and Guthrie RD "Internationalizing the Public Trust Doctrine: Natural Law and Constitutional and Statutory approaches to Fulfilling the Saxion Vision" 2011-2012 UCDLR 741-808

Budlender and Latsky 1990 SAJHR
Budlender G and Latsky J "Unravelling rights to land and agricultural activity in rural race zones" 1990 SAJHR 155-177

C

Cameron et al Honore’s South African Law of Trusts
Cameron E et al Honore’s South African Law of Trusts 5th ed (Juta Law 2002)

Caspersen 1996 BC Envtl Aff LR
Caspersen ARC "The public trust doctrine and the impossibility of 'takings' by wildlife" 1996 Boston College Environmental Affairs Law Review 357-391

Coertze Trust in die Romeins-Hollandse Reg
Coertze LI Die Trust in die Romeins-Hollandse Reg (LLD-thesis Universiteit van Stellenbosch Stellenbosch 1948)

Coetzee Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte
Coetzee JP 'n Kritiese Onderzoek na die Aard en Inhoud van Trustbegunstigdes se Regte ingevolge die Suid Afrikaanse Reg (LLD-thesis UNISA Pretoria 2006)

Coetzee 2007 De Rebus
Coetzee JP "Die regte van trustbegunstigdes- n Nuwe wind wat waai?" 2007 De Rebus 24-29
Currie and De Waal The New Constitutional & Administrative Law
Currie I and De Waal J The New Constitutional & Administrative Law (Juta Cape Town 2001)

Currie and De Waal The Bill of Rights Handbook
Currie I and De Waal J The Bill of Rights Handbook 5th ed (Juta Cape Town 2005)

De la Harpe and Ramsden Guide to the National Water Act

De Waal 1993 THRHR
De Waal MJ "Anomalieë in die Suid-Afrikaanse trustreg" 1993 THRHR 1-10

De Waal 1998 TSAR
De Waal MJ "Die wysiging van 'n inter vivos trust" 1998 TSAR 326-334

De Waal 2000 SALJ

De Waal and Paleker Law of Succession and Trusts
De Waal M and Paleker M South African Law of Succession and Trusts: The Past Meeting the Present and Thoughts for the Future (Juta Cape Town 2014)

De Waal in Milo and Smits Privaatrecht: Trusts in Mixed Legal Systems
De Waal MJ in Milo, JM and Smits JM Privaatrecht: Trusts in Mixed Legal Systems (Ars Aequi Libri Nijmegen 2001)
De Waal and Paisley et al Mixed Legal Systems

De Waal and Theron 1991 TSAR
De Waal MJ and Theron L "Die aard van die trust in die Suid-Afrikaanse reg – skikking na aanleiding van behoeftte" 1991 TSAR 499-504

De Wet Die Ou Skrywers in Perspektief
De Wet JC Die Ou Skrywers in Perspektief (Butterworths, Durban 1988)

Du Toit 2001 TSAR
Du Toit FJ "Beyond Braun: An examination of some interesting issues from recent decisions on trusts" 2001 TSAR 123

Du Toit 2007 Stell LR
Du Toit F "The fiduciary office of trustee and the protection of contingent trust beneficiaries" 2007 Stell LR 469-482

Du Toit "Roman-Dutch Law"
Du Toit F "Roman-Dutch law in modern South African succession law" Source Unknown

Du Toit "Jurisprudential Milestones"

Du Toit South African Trust Law
E

Edwards The History of South African Law

G

Geach and Yeats Trusts: Law and Practice

Geach W and Yeats J Trusts: Law and Practice (Juta Cape Town 2007)

H

Hahlo and Kahn The SA Legal System and its Background

Hahlo HR and Kahn E The SA legal system and its background (Juta Cape Town 1973)

Hall The Origin and Development of Water Rights

Hall CG The Origin and Development of Water Rights in South Africa 1st ed (Oxford University Press Oxford 1939)

Harding Importance of Adhering to the Basic Trust Idea

Harding M Importance of Adhering to the Basic Trust Idea in the formation and administration of trusts (LLM-dissertation University of Pretoria Pretoria 2012)

Hayley Equity and Trusts in a Nutshell

Hayley M Equity and Trusts in a Nutshell 6th ed (Sweet and Maxwell London 2004)

Hayton Cases and Commentary on the Law of Trusts

Hayton D Cases and Commentary on the Law of Trusts 9th ed (Sweet and Maxwell London 1991)
Hayton The Law of Trusts

Hiemstra and Gonin Trilingual Legal Dictionary
Hiemstra V G and Gonin H L Trilingual Legal Dictionary 9th ed (Juta Cape Town 2013)

Honoré and Cameron Law of Trusts

Honoré and Cameron The South African Law of Trusts

Huffman 1988 Envtl L
Huffman JL "A fish out of water: The public trust doctrine in a constitutional democracy" 1988 Environmental Law 527-528

J

Joubert 1968 THRHR
Joubert CP "n Kritiese beskouing van Honoré se opvattings oor ons trustreg" 1968 THRHR 124-146

K

Keeton and Sheridan The Law of Trusts
Kerr The Customary Law of Immovable Property
   Kerr AJ The Customary Law of Immovable Property and of Succession
   3rd ed (LexisNexis Durban 1990)

Kerr The juristic nature of trusts inter vivos
   Kerr AJ "The juristic nature of trusts inter vivos" 1958 SALJ 84

Kerr The Customary Law of Immovable Property
   Kerr AJ The customary law of immovable property and of succession
   3rd ed (Grocott & Sherry Grahamstown 1990)

Kidd Environmental Law
   Kidd M Environmental Law 2nd ed (Juta Cape Town 2011)

Kitshoff Gedagtes oor die Regsaard van ‘n Trust
   Kitshoff J Gedagtes oor die regsaard van ‘n trust (LLM-dissertation
   North West University Potchefstroom 2001)

Kloppers 2006 TSAR
   Kloppers HJ "Enkele lesse vir trustees uit die Parker-beslissing Land and Agricultural Bank of South Africa v Parker 2005 2 SA 7 (HHA)" 2006 TSAR 414-423

L

Lamprecht Die Bestaansreg van ‘n Besigheidstrust
   Lamprecht M Die Bestaansreg van ‘n Besigheidstrust (LLM-dissertation
   North West University Potchefstroom 2010)

Le Paulle 1926 Yale LR
   Le Paulle P "Civil law substitutes for trusts" 1926 Yale LR 1126-1147
Milo and Smits 2000 European Review of Private Law

Mostert and Pope "The Principles of the Law of Property in South Africa"
Mostert H and Pope A (eds) "The principles of the law of property in South Africa" (Oxford University Press Cape Town 2010)

Mowbray Lewin on Trusts
Mowbray J Lewin on Trusts 17th ed (Sweet and Maxwell London 2000)

Mthethwa The Common Law and Taxation of Trusts

Noeth Common law Perspectives on the Concept of Public Trusteeship
Noeth LV Common law perspectives on the concept of public trusteeship (LLM-dissertation North West University Potchefstroom 2011)

Oakley and Parker The Modern Law of Trusts

Olivier 2002 TSAR
Olivier L "The treatment of trusts for income and capital gains tax purposes: The screws tighten" 2002 TSAR 220-221
Olivier 1997 TSAR
  Olivier L "The law of trust: Some reflections on recent decisions" 1997
  TSAR 765-771

Olivier and Van den Bergh Praktiese Boedelbeplanning
  Olivier PA and Van den Bergh GPJ Praktiese Boedelbeplanning (Juta Cape Town 1991)

Olivier, Strydom and Van den Berg Trustreg en Praktyk
  Olivier PA, Strydom S and Van den Berg GPJ Trustreg en Praktyk 3de
  uitg (Lexis Nexis 2011)

Olivier Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees
  Olivier PA Aspekte van die Reg insake Trust en Trustees met Besondere Verwysing na die Amerikaanse reg (LLD-thesis University of Pretoria Pretoria 1982)

P

Pace and Van der Westhuizen Wills and Trusts
  Pace RP and Van der Westhuizen WM Wills and Trusts 9th ed
  (LexisNexis Durban 2008)

Pace and Van der Westhuizen Wills and Trusts
  Pace RP and Van der Westhuizen WM Wills and Trusts 2e uit
  (Butterworths Durban 1997)

Pienaar and Van der Schyff 2009 Forum on Public Policy: A Journal of the Oxford Round Table
  Pienaar GJ and Van der Schyff E "The Public Management of Water Resources in South Africa" 2009 Forum on Public Policy: A Journal of the Oxford Round Table 183-193
Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The History, Development and Allocation of Water Rights in South Africa"

Pieters Eienaarskap van Trustbates

Pieters JC Eienaarskap van Trustbates (LLM-dissertation North West University Potchefstroom 2010)

Pollock and Maitland The History of English Law

Pollock and Maitland The History of English Law before the time of Edward I 2nd ed (Cambridge University Press London 1968)

Pound An introduction to the philosophy of law

R

Rahman Defining the Concept Fiduciary Duty

Rahman L Defining the Concept Fiduciary Duty in the South African Law of Trusts (LLM-dissertation University of the Western Cape 2006)

Robbertse Going Beyond the Trust Veil

Robbertse C Going Beyond the Trust Veil in Insolvency and Divorce Matters (LLM-dissertation North West University Potchefstroom 2014)

S

Sand 2004 Global Environmental Politics

Sand PH "Sovereignty bounded: Public trusteeship for common pool resources?" 2004 Global Environmental Politics 47-71
Sax 1984 Berkeley Law Scholarship Repository
   Sax JL “Why I teach water law” 1984 Berkeley Law Scholarship Repository

Sher 2005 ISSN
   Sher H A “Closer Look at Trust Law” 2005 ISSN 77-80

Shrand Trusts in South Africa
   Shrand D Trusts in South Africa (Citadel Cape Town 1976)

Smith The Authorization of Trustees

Stafford A Legal-Comparative Study

Stein 2002 Natural resources law: School of law- University of Colorado
   Stein R “Water law in a democratic South Africa: A Country case study examining the introduction of a public rights system, in allocating and managing water for a sustainable future: lessons from around the world" 2002 Natural resources law: School of law - University of Colorado

Stein 2005 Texas law review
   Stein R "Water law in a democratic South Africa: a country case study examining the introduction of a public rights system" 2005 Texas law review 2167-2183
Stevens 1980 UC Davis LR

Stiglingh et al SILKE: South African Income Tax

T

Thompson Water law
Thompson H Water law a practical approach to resource management and the provision of services (Juta Cape Town 2006)

Turnbull et al Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary

Turnipseed 2010 Environment Magazine

V

Van der Merwe and Rowland Erfreg
Van der Merwe NJ and Rowland CJ Die Suid Afrikaanse Erfreg 6th ed (Van der Walt Pretoria 1990)

Van der Schyff 2010 PELJ
Van der Schyff E "Unpacking the public trust doctrine: A journey into foreign territory" 2010 PELJ 122-189
Van der Schyff 2013 SALJ
Van der Schyff E "Stewardship doctrines of public trust : Has the eagle of public trust landed on South African soil?" 2013 SALJ 369-389

Van der Schyff and Viljoen 2008 The Journal for Transdisciplinary Research in Southern Africa

Van der Schyff The Constitutionality of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act

Van der Schyff Die Nasionalisering van Waterregte in Suid-Afrika

Van Der Schyff 2008 TSAR
Van Der Schyff E Who 'owns' the country's mineral resources? The possible incorporation of the public trust doctrine through Section 3(1) of the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act 28 of 2002 2008 4 TSAR 757

Van der Schyff "South African Natural Resources"
Van Jaarsveld Suid Afrikaanse Handelsreg
Van Jaarsveld SR Suid Afrikaanse Handelsreg 3e uit (Perskor Johannesburg 1988)

Van Zyl *Geskiedenis en Beginsels van die Romeinse Privaatre*ng
Van Zyl DH *Geskiedenis en Beginsels van die Romeinse Privaatre*ng (LexisNexis Durban 2003)

Viljoen The Public Trust Doctrine

Viljoen Water as Public Property

Vorster and Coetzee 2015 PELJ

W

Wessels Waterreg in 'n Nuwe Konstitusionele Bedeling
Wessels C Waterreg in 'n Nuwe Konstitusionele Bedeling (LLM-Dissertation Potchefstroomse Universiteit vir Christelike Hoër Onderwys 2001)

Y

Young Public Trusteeship and Water Management
Young CL Public Trusteeship and Water Management: Developing the South African Concept of Public Trusteeship to Improve Management

Z

Zimmermann and Visser "South African Law as a Mixed Legal System"

Contributions at conferences

M

Muir 2016 "Using the South African Law of Trusts"
Muir A 2016 "Using the South African law of trusts to predict some features of the nascent South African Public Trust Doctrine" in "The Legal Implications of the State as Custodian" 28 October 2016 A colloquium on what the concepts of public trusteeship and state custodianship mean, that explore the legal construction of the concepts and that anticipates the possible practical implication of these concepts.

P

Pienaar and Van der Schyff "The reform of water rights in South Africa"
V Van Der Westhuizen "What every attorney should know about trusts"
Van Der Westhuizen "What every attorney should know about trusts" in Law Society of the Northern Provinces Seminar held in Pretoria on 23 May 2016 143

Viljoen 2016 "Legal Implications of the Concept of Public Trusteeship"
Viljoen G 2016 "Legal Implications of the Concept of Public Trusteeship IN South African Water Law" in "The Legal Implications of the State as Custodian" 28 October 2016 A colloquium on what the concepts of public trusteeship and state custodianship mean, that explore the legal construction of the concepts and that anticipates the possible practical implication of these concepts.

Case law

Adam v Jhavary 1926 AD 147
Administrators, Estate Richards v Nichol 1996 4 SA 253 (C)
African Bank Ltd v Weiner 2003 4 All SA 50 (C)
Agri South Africa v Minister for Minerals and Energy (458/2011) 2012 ZASCA 93; 2012 5 SA 1 (SCA); 2012 3 All SA 266 (SCA); 2012 9 BCLR 958 (SCA) (31 May 2012) 49
Agri South Africa v Minister for Minerals and Energy 2013 4 SA 1 (CC)
Badenhorst v Badenhorst 2006 2 SA 255 (HHA)
Bafokeng Tribe v Impala Platinum Ltd 1999 3 SA 517 (BH)
BOE Bank Ltd v Trustees, Knox Property Trust 1999 1 SA 425 (D)
BP Southern Africa (Pty) Ltd v MEC for Agriculture, Conservation, Environment and Land Affairs 2004 5 SA 124 (W)
Braun v Blann and Botha 1984 2 SA 850 (A)
Buissine and Another v Mulder et Uxor 1835 Menzies Reports 1828-1849 Vol.1
Cilliers v Kuhn 1975 3 SA 881 (NC)
CIR v Emary 1961 2 SA 621 (A)
CIR v Estate Crewe 1943 AD 656
CIR v Friedman 1993 1 SA 353 (A)
CIR v Macneillie’s Estate 1961 3 SA 833 (A)
Clarkson NO v Gelb 1981 1 SA 288 (W)
Conze v Masterbond Participation Trust Managers 1996 3 SA 786 (C)
Crookes v Watson 1956 1 SA 277 (A)
Dadabhya v Dadabhya 1981 3 SA 1039 (A)
Daewoo Heavy Industries (SA) (Pty) Ltd v Banks 2004 2 All SA 530 (C)
Deedat v The Master 1995 2 SA 377 (A)
Devenish v Peacock and Josef 1843 Menzies Reports 1828-1849 Vol.3 503
Doyle v Board of Executors 1999 2 SA 805 (C)
Du Toit Group (Pty) Ltd v Van Breda and Others 2009 ZAWCHC 152
Estate Kemp v Macdonald’s Trustee 1915 AD 491
Ex Parte Kerr 1914 AD 503
Ex Parte Ross 1909 TS 1132
Fuel Retailers Association of South Africa v Director-General: Environmental Management, Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Environment, Mpumalanga Province 2007 6 SA 4 (CC)
Ghersi v Tiber Developments (Pty) Ltd 2007 4 SA 536 (SCA)
Gross v Pentz 1996 4 SA 617 (A)
Harter v Epstein 1953 1 SA 287 (A)
Hofer v Kevitt 1998 1 SA 382 (SCA)
Hoosen v Deedat 1999 4 SA 425 (SCA)
Hoppen v Shub 1987 3 SA 201 (C)
Hough v Van der Merwe 1874 4 Buchanan 148
Howard v Herrigel 1991 2 SA 660 (A)
Jordaan v Jordaan 2001 3 SA 288 (K)
Jowell v Bramwell-Jones 1998 1 SA 836 (W)
Kinloch v Secretary of State for India in Council 1882 7 App. Cas 619 at 630
Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker 2004 4 1 All SA 261 (SCA)
Land and Agriculture Development Bank of SA v Parker 2005 2 SA 77 (SCA)
Lekoma v Dikgole 1947 2 PH M 45 (GW)
Liebenberg v MGK Bedryfsmatskappy (Pty) Ltd 2003 2 SA 224 (SCA)
Lockhat's Estate v North British & Mercantile Insurance 1959 3 SA 295 (A)
Lucas' Trustee v Ismail and Amod 1905 TS 239
Lupacchini v Minister of Safety and Security 2010 (SCA)
Metequity Ltd v NWN Properties Ltd 1998 2 SA 554 (T)
Minister of Education v Syfrets Trust Ltd 2006 4 SA 205 (C)
Mkangeli v Joubert 2002 4 SA 36 (SCA)
Molotlegi v President of Bophuthatswana 1989 3 SA 119 (B)
Mostert Snr v S 2010 s All SA 482 (SCA) 482
Nel v Metequity Ltd 2007 3 SA 34 (SCA)
Nieuwoudt v Vrystaat Mielies (Edms) Bpk 2004 3 SA 486 (SCA)
Oliver v Fourie 1899 16 SC 304
Oosthuizen v Bank Windhoek 1991 1 SA 849 (Nb)
Parker v Land and Agricultural Bank of SA 2003 1 All SA 258 (T)
Pentz v Gross 1996 2 SA 518 (C)
Peterson v Claassen 2006 5 SA 191 (K)
Phillips v Fieldstone Africa (Pty) Ltd 2004 1 All SA 150 (SCA)
Pretorius v CIR 1984 2 SA 619 (T)
Re Scott 1948 SASR 193
Retief v Louw 1874 Buchanan 165
Robertson v Robertson's Executors 1914 AD 503
Sackville West v Nourse 1925 AD 516
Sechaba v Kotze 2007 All SA 811 (NC)
Sheriff v Greene 1913 AD 240
Smit v Van de Werke 1984 1 SA 164 (T)
Strydom en 'n ander v De Lange 1970 2 SA 6 (T)
The Master v Edgecombe's Executors 1910 TS 263
Timstra v Blunt-MacKenzie 2002 1 SA 459 (T)
Tito v Waddell 1977 Ch 106
Trustees of South Africa Bank v Chiappini 1868 Buch Reports 1868-1870 143
Tsewu v Registrar of Deeds 1905 TS 130
Twenty Man v Hewitt 1833 Menzies Reports 1828-1849 Vol 1 156
Van der Merwe v Bosman 2010 5 SA 555 (WC)
Van der Merwe v Van der Merwe 2000 2 SA 519 (C)
Van der Plank v Otto 1912 AD
Van Rooyen v Minister of Minerals and Energy 2010 1 SA 104 (GNP)
Van Zyl v Kaye 2014 4 SA 452 (WKK)
Welch’s Estate v Commissioner, South African Revenue Service 2005 4 SA 173 (HHA)
White v Collins 1914 WLD 35
WT v KT (933/2013) 2015 ZASCA 9 an unreported case
Zinn v Westminster Bank Ltd 1936 AD 89

Legislation

Administration of Estates Act 66 of 1965
Companies Act 71 of 2008
Hague Convention on the Law Applicable to Trusts and on their Recognition, 1 July 1985
Income Tax Act 58 of 1962
Irrigation Act 24 of 1894
Irrigation and Conservation of Water Act 8 of 1912
KwaZulu-Natal Ingonyama Trust Act 3 of 1994
Mineral and Petroleum Resources Act 28 of 2004
Natal Mission Reserved Act 49 of 1903
Natal Native Trust Act 1 of 1912
National Environmental Management Act 107 of 1998
National Environmental Management: Biodiversity Act 10 of 2004
National Lotteries Act 57 of 1997
National Water Act 36 of 1998
Ordnance 4 of 1829
Ordnance 5 of 1832
Proclamation R28 of 1992
Recognition of Trusts Act 1987
Right of Passage to Water Act 24 of 1876
South African Development Trust and Land Act 18 of 1936
Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act of 1925
Transfer Duty Act 47 of 1937
Trust Property Control Act 57 of 1988
Value Added Tax Act 89 of 1991
Water Act 40 of 1899
Water Act 54 of 1956
Water Services Act 108 of 1997
White Paper on a National Water Policy for South Africa, 1997

Internet sources

Anon 2010 http://www.businessdictionary.com
   Anon 2010 Business Dictionary http://www.businessdictionary.com accessed 4 March 2013

Anon 2013 http://www.investorwords.com
   Anon 2013 InvestorWords.com – Online Investing Glossary
   http://www.investorwords.com accessed 4 March 2013

Anon 2015 http://trustguru.co.za/Learn_about_Trusts.html
   Anon 2015 http://trustguru.co.za/Learn_about_Trusts.html accessed 18
   August 2015

Garber Date Unknown http://www.wills.about.com
   Garber J Date Unknown About.com Wills & Estate Planning
   http://www.wills.about.com accessed 4 March 2013

   Hill GN and Hill KT 2005 Legal Dictionary – The free dictionary
   2013
Other papers and reports

Fundamental Principles and Objectives for the New Water Law in South Africa approved by the Cabinet in November 1996
GN 132 in GG 9070 of 24 February 1984
Rogers P and Hall HW "Effective water governance" Global Water Partnership Technical Committee Background Paper no 7
Second Treatise of Civil Government, John Locke 1690
Working paper 3 of the South African Law Commission, 1984
The Holy Bible 1953 translation
DECLARATION OF LANGUAGE EDITING

I, Christina Maria Etrecia Terblanche, hereby declare that I edited the research study titled:

The Public Trust Doctrine in South African Water Law: Does the Inter Vivos Trust-shoe fit?

for Alta Roos for the purpose of submission as a postgraduate dissertation for examination. Changes were suggested and implementation was left to the discretion of the author.

Regards,

CME Terblanche
Cum Laude Language Practitioners (CC)
SATI accr nr: 1001066
Registered with PEG