CHAPTER 3

APPROACHES TO SYLLABUS DESIGN

3.1	Introduction	68
3.2	The terms 'curriculum' and 'syllabus'	68
3.2.1	Curriculum	68
3.2.2	Syllabus	69
3.3	Models for syllabus design	71
3.4	Ideological approaches to syllabus design	73
3.4.1	The classical humanist approach	73
3.4.2	The reconstructionist approach	77
3.4.3	The progressivist approach	81

3.5	The process of syllabus design	83
3.5.1	The situation analysis	84
3.5.1.1	Decision-making	85
3.5.1.2	A typology of ESL needs	86
3.6	Aims and objectives	88
3.6.1	Aims	88
3.6.2	Objectives	89
3.7	Selection and grading of content	92
3.7.1	Selecting content for ESL	92
3.7.2	The grading of content for ESL	94
3.8	Teaching-learning opportunities	98
3.9	Assessment	100
3.10	Syllabus evaluation	101
3.11	Constraints on renewal in syllabus design	102
3.11.1	Policy constraints	103
3.11.2	Pragmatic constraints	104
3.12	Conclusion	106

CHAPTER 4

TASK-BASED APPROACHES TO SYLLABUS DESIGN

4.1	Introduction	109
4.2	A definition of 'task'	109
4.3	Theoretical bases of a task-based approach to ESL	111
4.3.1	Input theory	112
4.3.2	Output theory	113
4.3.3	Discourse theory	114

6.3.3 The teacher in South African ESL classrooms 233

6.4 Conclusion 238

CHAPTER 7

A THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK FOR A TASK-BASED SYLLABUS FOR PRIMARY SCHOOLS IN SOUTH AFRICA

7.1	Introduction	241
7.2	Major findings	241
7.3	A generative model for task design	249
7.4	A framework for a task-based syllabus	253
7.4.1	The situation analysis	254
7.4.2	Aims and objectives	254
7.4.3	Content and teaching-learning opportunities	255
7.4.4	Assessment	255
7.5	Conclusion	255

CHAPTER 8

A TASK-BASED SYLLABUS FOR ENGLISH IN SOUTH AFRICAN PRIMARY SCHOOLS

8.1	Introduction	257
8.2	Situation analysis	258
8.3	The aims of the course	258
8.4	Objectives for the primary phases	260
8.5	Content and teaching-learning opportunities	261
8.5.1	Criteria for task selection	262
8.5.2	Criteria for the grading of tasks	262
8.5.3	Themes and related topics	263
8.5.4	Vocabulary	265
8.5.5	Resources	266
8.5.6	Language forms and communicative functions	268
